Haslemere appeared to be of slightly better class than her opponents in the Oatlands Selling Plate. The daughter of Diomedes won rather cleverly from the favourite Taps, with Hyssop third.

Dance Little Lady, who had run well when beaten by Larboard at Windsor last Saturday, made the running from Taps and Jink, with Haslemere not too well placed. Taps swerved at the dis- tance, but Sharples straightened him and looked like winning until Harry Wragg brought Haslemere with a well- timed run on the outside.

Haslemere eventually won by a length from the favourite, Hyssop beating Dance Little Lady fairly comfortably for third place three-parts of a length behind Taps. There was considerable competition for the winner before she was knocked down to Captain O. M. D. Bell for 500 guineas.

TOLARRA'S SUCCESS.

It very often happens that a horse who is entered for a seller and is down on the programme to be offered for sale, win or lose, wins. Tolarra, who had top- weight in the Nonesuch Selling Plate, came in this category, and gained an easy victory over Nebulous, with the favourite, Woolsack, a head away third.

Miss Canada set off in front of Wool- sack, but Jones, who rode the latter, slipped his field approaching the straight, and turned for home fully three lengths ahead. Halfway up the straight Natal Day put in a challenge, but faded out inside the distance, and Woolsack was then caught and beaten by Tolarra, who won by three lengths.

WHEN LEAST EXPECTED.

The winner, a colt by Tolgus, is an uncertain sort of animal that wins when least expected. His only success as a juvenile last season was at Kempton Park, where he started at 25 to 1. His price yesterday was 100 to 8, the tote paying more than double those odds. He was bought by Stanley Wootton, who gradually increasing his string again, 250 guineas.

A certain amount of mild confusion caused by the fact that two of the for the Apprentices' Plate were Noble Venture and Tragic The "Noble" one was made but it was the gelding out of Tragedienne that won, and, as he at 100 to 9, the bookmakers home rejoicing.

Way, Portefeuille, and Noble were the early leaders, and Way was still in front enter- straight. Below the distance was just ahead of Bagpipes, Tragic Venture challenged shortly ards, and got up to win by three- a length.

ALLEGED MURDER ATTEMPT.

SHOCK FOR MATRON.

DRAMATIC COURT STORY.

EX-PORTER FOR TRIAL.

Awakening to find a dark form standing facing her by her bed, a hospital matron believed that she was having a nightmare.

She screamed and a man jumped on the bed and attacked her.

This story was told by prosecuting counsel at Halifax on Friday, when H. Reginald Sharp (31), described as unemployed, of Churst Street, Halifax, was charged with attempting to murder the assistant matron of Royal Halifax Infirmary on August 6.

Sharp was also charged with robbery with violence of a purse containing 1s 2d and three receipts, and also with burglary.

Mr. W. N. Curtis, prosecuting, said that evidence would be given by a man named Senior that on August 4 Sharp showed him a bottle which, he said, contained chloroform. Sharp told him that he had been discharged from employment at the Halifax Infirmary.

Mr. Curtis said that Emily Kinch, the assistant matron, was a completely innocent victim of a very violent assault by Sharp. This had had a very grave effect on her health. She would say that on the night of August 5 she went to bed in her room, which was immediately below that occupied by a Miss Simonette.

Miss Kinch read until about 11-50 and then extinguished the light. She fell asleep and the next thing she remembered was wakening up and seeing a dark object facing her and close by her bedside. The time was about 4-30 because there was a certain amount of daylight and she could distinguish the object faintly.

At first she thought she was suffering from a nightmare and she closed her eyes and opened them once or twice before she realised that the object standing by her bedside was a human being.

She screamed and a man, alleged to be Sharp, jumped on to the bed, got astride of her, placed his hand on her throat and one hand over her mouth presumably to prevent her screaming. One of his fingers got into her mouth and she would say that she bit it hard.

"ATTACK WAS MOST BRUTAL."

The attack was most brutal and the pressure kept on her throat was so violent that she felt his object was to take her life. She struggled very hard but finally became semi-conscious. Immediately after she felt something cold being splashed over her face. It seemed like ether or chloroform, and she lost consciousness Her screams, however, had roused Miss Simonette, who came down and opened the door of Miss Kinch's room, but an arm came through and she was knocked back into the corridor. The light was put out and a man ran past her.

A doctor found Miss Kinch in a deep state of anæsthesia. She suffered severe pain in the throat, her teeth were loosened and she was burned by chloroform on the neck and shoulders.

Sharp was arrested at his parents' home on August 9. He said, it was alleged, "I haven't slept for a week. The matron is the cause of this. It was her I wanted to make suffer."

Later Sharp made an alleged statement, which Mr. Curtis read: "After leaving my friend John Senior on Friday night, August 5, I went to 58 Paradise Street and went to bed. I got up at midnight as I could not sleep. I had a kind of nightmare, which I attributed to being out of work and having spent all my savings this last two years.

"I said to myself, 'Here goes. I am going to make an end of it. I will murder the Matron, because she is the cause of all my troubles.' I had in my bedroom a bottle of chloroform which I got from the Infirmary two years ago for a man to kill a dog.

"He said that he had a key which opened the basement door at the infirmary. He went into the basement about one a.m. and roamed about there for two or three hours. He then went into the matron's bedroom, but found she was not there. I went across to the assistant matron's bedroom and thought it was the matron in bed," the statement went on. "He took a purse and a cigarette case from the dressing table. Later he threw these away on Norland Moor. The cigarette case had the initials 'E.K.' on it, and he knew then he had made a mistake.

"Then he went to the wall just behind the door and sprinkled chloroform on handkerchiefs and put them to the woman's nose.

"She was sleeping. It was my intention to murder her. When I left home I said to myself, 'I have nothing to live for. I might as well get hung," the statement said.

"PUT MORE CHLOROFORM ON."

When she woke up he pressed the handkerchief tighter and put more chloroform on. "She then bit my finger, and I poured the remaining chloroform on to the handkerchiefs. She commenced to scream and to shout, so I put a pillow over her face. Someone came to the door. I saw it was Sister Simonette. She switched on the light, putting her hand through the opening of the door to do it. I then switched it off, and dashed past her and grabbed my raincoat from the window bottom in the corridor and left by the same way I went in."

The statement went on to relate how accused spent Saturday and Sunday in Huddersfield, Dewsbury and Brighouse, returned home and read an account of the robbery and attack on Miss Kinch. Later he went to Soyland, and slept on a haystack. "I got up, and decided to hang myself, but changed my mind, and came home to see how things were," the statement concluded. "I thought there might be a letter from my wife, who was at Castleford."

Emily Kinch and Edith Anne Simonette gave evidence bearing out counsel's statement.

"A TERRIFIC STRUGGLE."

Detective-Sergeant John Moorhouse said that Miss Kinch appeared to have had a terrific struggle. There were bloodstains on the bedclothes and floor. The matron's room had also been ransacked. When arrested Sharp said—"Yes, I must have been mad. I did it. I will tell you everything." There were sores on Sharp's middle finger and on the thumb

Ivy Scott, matron of the infirmary, stated that Sharp, a former porter, resigned two years ago on account of misconduct. She had no conversations with him respecting the misconduct or his resignation.

Sharp, who pleaded not guilty and reserved his defence, was committed for trial at the next Leeds Assizes.

TANFIELD'S ASSETS.

QUEST OF HIS TRUSTEES.

TAKES MORE HOPEFUL TURN.

The search for the assets of Stanley W. Tanfield, the city financier, who is now serving a sentence of seven years' penal servitude, took a more promising turn.

Messrs. Percy Phillips & Co., accountants, of Langham Street W., who are trustees in the bankruptcy received some very helpful information from former friends of Tanfield.

Mr. Percy Phillips told a Press Association reporter—"I have now received permission from the Home Office to interview Tanfield in Wormwood Scrubs Prison. I am hoping to get from him the key to his safe deposit in Pall Mall.

"I shall probably not see him until Monday, however. Whatever is in the safe will remain there. To-morrow I shall probably go to Paris, where, I understand, there is a safe deposit which may contain something of interest to us."

FRENCH WOODS INCIDENT.

PARIS, Friday.—Walking through the woods at Vincennes, a suburb of Paris, yesterday, Marcel Bourcy noticed a car pull up at a tree and a man alight from it.

As Bourcy watched he saw the motorist dig a hole, place a packet in the cavity, and quickly replace the soil.

When the car drove off Bourcy removed the packet from its hiding place and found to his amazement that it contained French bonds to the value of 1,500,000 francs (about £8,600).

The police, who are making every effort to find the motorist, believe that the bonds are the proceeds of a recent bank robbery.—Central News.

TEACHERS AND THE TERRITORIALS.

THE GRANTING OF LEAVE.

PROPOSAL MINISTRY APPROVE.

Alderman D. Lyle Hall presided at the meeting of the Belfast Education Committee held in the City Hall.

A communication was submitted from the Ministry of Education approving of the proposal of Education authorities that teachers in their employment be permitted to join the Territorial Army and the Officers' Training Corps, such teachers being granted the necessary leave of absence from school duty without being required to provide a substitute, up to a maximum of twelve school days whilst attending annual training in camp, similar treatment to be accorded to all ranks in these forces, such arrangement to be taken as provisional and subject to review.

THEY REALLY WERE GULLS.

TRIED TO HATCH GOLF BALL,

ONIONS AND COTTON REELS.

The extraordinary objects that birds will attempt to hatch if deprived of their eggs were described by Mr. F. B. Kirkman, the London ornithologist, at the British Association meeting at Cambridge.

He outlined experiments that he had made with black-headed gulls which he had watched from a tent.

They will try to hatch almost anything egg-shaped, he said, and one bird sat on a rubber ball for 22 days. Other birds sat on substitutes for eggs for periods ranging from 4½ days to 22 days.

Among the objects they tried to hatch were onions, golf balls, camphor balls and cotton reels.

"One bird would not accept a cricket ball," he said. "It tried to. There was no lack of enthusiasm, and it made the most heroic effort to sit on the cricket ball, but only succeeded in rolling off on the other side."

Mr. Kirkman said that some birds would roll egg substitutes into their nests. He made an experiment with twelve different birds. Four of them would have nothing to do with the substitute, four rolled an egg-shaped object, and four of them went the whole hog and rolled in anything he put.

STORY OF HOLD-UP.

"INVENTION," SAYS DRIVER.

POLICE HAD ALL-DAY SEARCH.

A surprising development followed an all-day police search throughout Devon on Thursday for a blue racing car with red wheels, said to have been used by three men in an armed hold-up of a lorry-driver shortly after midnight, near Ashburton, on the Exeter-Plymouth road.

The lorry-driver on Friday admitted that his story was an invention, and he signed a statement to that effect.

In his original story he told the police that one of the men said "Put up your hands" and that a man with a gun jabbed the weapon into his ribs, while another went through his pockets and took money.

While this was being done a car started up and came alongside, whereupon the two men jumped on to the running board of the car, which raced away without lights at a fast speed.

The lorry driver said he could not see the car's number as his own headlights had been turned down.

Exeter county police are to-day considering whether any action should be taken.

NATIONAL PARK

WANTED FOR BRITAIN.

TO KEEP REINDEER AND BEAVER.

The Earl of Onslow, speaking at the conference of delegates of Corresponding Societies, in connection with the British Association, expressed the view that the only suitable place in the country for a national park for the preservation of our fauna—or what was left of it—was in Scotland, and that deer forest land on the west coast would lend itself most readily to such a purpose.

The reindeer, wild pig and beaver had become extinct in England within the last few centuries, and there seemed no reason why they should not be reintroduced. A beaver dam and a number of beavers on a river in a national park would be a great attraction for the public.

Wild pigs in Surrey existed up to the end of the seventeenth century and they seemed to have become extinct—less owing to their having been killed than from their having been domesticated, said Lord Onslow. Charles I. introduced wild boars into the New Forest, and the half wild pigs which used to roam in the forest until recently probably had this blood in them as they were very hairy.

COWARDLY ATTACK

ON ARGENTINE SAILORS.

MIDNIGHT FIGHT IN LIVERPOOL.

"If you behave like this to foreign sailors, how can you expect to be treated in foreign ports? It was a most cowardly and improper attack on two foreigners, and you ought to be thoroughly ashamed of yourselves."

The deputy stipendiary, Mr. S. C. V. Addinsell, said this at Liverpool Police Court, when Harold Douglas Joseph Young, (20), Christopher Patrick Brindle (20), stokers on leave from H.M.S. Royal Oak; and Phillip Sturdie Young (23), labourer, Bunyan Street, were found guilty of assaulting Rolando Riviere, a member of the crew of the Argentine cadet ship Entre Rios, in Prescot Street.

Harold Young and Brindle were discharged and ordered to pay £1 0s 6d costs between them. Phillip Young was fined £1 10s.

Accused all pleaded not guilty.

Mr. E. H. Sidgreaves, prosecuting, said the two British sailors and another man were in London Road when they apparently objected to an Argentine sailor being seen with an English girl and a fight resulted.

Rolando Riviere, an engine-room artificer on the Argentine cadet ship Entre Rios, said he was walking with a girl in London Road at 11-30 p.m. and another Argentine sailor was also with a girl companion.

The three accused came up and invited them to fight, but they walked away as they did not want to create a scene. The accused followed them into Prescot Street, attacked them, and during the struggle he was thrown to the ground and received several blows on the head. Later a stitch was inserted in a wound in his chin. One of the girls was also assaulted and sustained an injury to her hand while trying to pull the accused away.

Accused all denied they provoked the fight, and stated that they said "Good night" to the Argentine sailors as they passed. Riviere used an offensive expression, and when they went back to ask what he meant, Riviere smacked Phillip Young in the face. This started the trouble. They could not account for the girl being injured.

The deputy stipendiary said their conduct had been disgraceful, and there was no excuse for it at all.

GREYHOUND TRACK THEFT.

£350 IN SILVER AND COPPERS.

Thieves who raided the offices of the Slough (Thames Valley) Greyhound Track, secured a haul of £350 in silver and coppers.

They broke into the cashier's office by smashing a window, and took the whole of the contents of the safe, which consisted of part of the takings on the totalisator and at the gates of the greyhound race meeting.

There were no notes, these having been paid into the bank night safe.

'NEGLIGENT DRIVING' OF COW.

SOMETHING NEW, SAID R.M.

CASE AT NEWTOWNBREDA COURT.

"Negligent driving"—of a cow—was the summons against William Andrews, Imperial Street, Belfast, heard at Newtownbreda Petty Sessions. It was brought under an Act of 1851.

"This is something new," said Mr. Austin, R.M., when the case was called.

District-Inspector M'Kinley said Andrews left the cow unattended on the Saintfield Road, causing a collision with a car driven by Thomas M'Intyre, Finaghy, Belfast.

Andrews, who was on a cart, said he waved to the motorist to stop.

"That was the first cow and it will be the last," he added.

Mr. Austin imposed a fine of 5s. He refused 18s 6d costs to Thomas Smyth, an electrician, of Drumalig, Saintfield, driver of the van in which Andrews was riding, on the grounds that he had contributed to the accident by giving him a lift.

DEATH OF REV. A. E. CARSON

WELL-KNOWN METHODIST MINISTER.

We regret to announce the death, which took place in Bangor Co. Down, on Friday, of Rev. Albert E. Carson, B.A., a well-known member of the Methodist Ministry, who was appointed to Broomhedge Church at the Conference in July last.

A son of the manse, his father being the late Rev. James Carson, he was ordained to the ministry in 1903. He was a graduate of the Royal University of Ireland. During his ministry Rev. Mr. Carson served in Portadown, Londonderry, Dublin, Carrickfergus, Skibbereen, Tinahely, Tralee, Kingstown, Portrush, and Lurgan. His last station was at Drumshambo, where he was chairman of the Sligo District.

Rev. Mr. Carson was an able preacher and possessed considerable literary gifts. At the last Conference he was the reader of the Pastoral address. In the course of his successful ministry he was largely instrumental in the erection of the Memorial Hall in connection with the Portrush Church.

He had taken up his duties at Broomhedge only in July last. In the last few months, however, he had not been in good health and his death took place at the home of his sisters, where he was on holiday. He was unmarried.

TREASURE HUNTER

CLAIMS IMPORTANT FIND.

ON TRACK OF SOMETHING BIG.

Mr. George Anthony Cathcart Walker Heneage, the big-game hunter of Killochan Castle, Girvan, Ayrshire, who, with six men, began digging for hidden treasure on his Carlton Estate, Girvan, this week, states that he had made an important find.

"I am quite satisfied we are on the track of something which may astonish the general public," said Mr. Heneage. He refused to divulge the nature of his find, but said the digging operations would be resumed next week.

The digging is being carried out at the bottom of Carlton Glen for treasure said to have been hidden there by smugglers centuries ago.

The treasure is reputed to have come from a Spanish galleon wrecked off the Girvan coast.

Mr. Heneage remarried in July, 1934, his former wife (whom he first married in 1929), after the marriage had been dissolved in 1932. Before her marriage Mrs. Heneage was Miss Jean Mann-Thompson, member of a well-known Leicestershire family.

A party of 70 Old Contemptibles from Ulster arrived in London to-day on the way to Ypres, Belgium, where a tablet will be unveiled on Sunday by the Mayor of Ypres.

Included in the party are Mr. L. N. Murphy, vice-president Northern Ireland Old Contemptibles' Association; Major Nolan, Major Donnelly, and Mr. Richie, organising hon. secretary Northern Ireland.

The wording of the tablet is as follows:

"To the glory of God and in immortal memory of all ranks of the contemptible little British Army who fought around Ypres and in the Salient during those critical days, October 11—November 22, 1914, and in remembrance of those of that army who fell by the way.

"Erected by the Old Contemptibles' Association of Northern Ireland, August 21, 1938."

The party will spend two days in Ypres and two days in Brussels.

An official reception will be given in their honour at Mons by the Mayor on the anniversary of the first Battle of Mons, August 23.

They will return to Ypres for a tour of the battlefields and leave for Belfast on Sunday week.

CRIME OF JEALOUSY.

NURSE THROWS ACID OVER DOCTOR.

BUKHAREST (Roumania), Friday.—A drama of unrequited love was played out in the town of Focsany, in Eastern Roumania, to-day, when a nurse threw a pail of acid over a hospital doctor.

The doctor, whose name is given as Constantinescu, was seriously burned, and is now in a critical condition. A second doctor, who was working nearby at the time, was also hurt.

The nurse, who is alleged to have acted in a fit of jealousy and because her love was not returned, has been arrested.—Central News.

EXPORT CREDITS DEPARTMENT

EXTENDED TO ULSTER.

PRESSMEN MEET MANAGER.

HE IS ANXIOUS TO EXPLAIN SCHEME

An Imperial Government scheme which has as its aim the avoidance of frozen debts due to British exporters by foreign buyers has been extended to Northern Ireland, and should prove invaluable to exporters in the Province.

The basis of the scheme is to insure the exporter of British goods against bad debts due to the insolvency of foreign buyers.

The scheme is run by Export Credits Guarantee Department, the Northern Ireland Branch of which is at 7 Donegall Square West. Mr. A. L. MacManus, an Ulsterman, whose district is Scotland and the North of Ireland, received Press representatives, and introduced to them the new manager of the Northern Ireland Branch, Mr. G. A. Hill Macpherson.

The scheme, which is elastic, economic and covers any type of business, has the blessing of the Ministry of Commerce, the Chamber of Commerce and the banks, who feel that the presence of the Department will encourage the export trade of the Province. In short, it represents a Government guarantee of payment in sterling, and affords protection to exporters of United Kingdom goods against their main risk in overseas trading.

Mr. Macpherson is eager to explain the scheme to exporters, and would welcome all inquiries from businessmen.

The essence of the policy is not that the exporter should pay a premium to the Government or to feel that the Government should pay his bad debt, but rather he pays a premium to ensure that he has no bad debt.

Asked if such insurance was costly, Mr. MacManus replied that the cost of the scheme for a comprehensive policy varied, the average maximum highest rate of premium was one per cent., and the average minimum lowest one half per cent. If a comprehensive guarantee policy were taken out the Department would be prepared to attach a rider to it guaranteeing 75 per cent of the sterling on a fixed date and that was applicable to practically every country, the premiums were merely to pay overhead expenses, cost of inquiries, and claims.

The Board of Trade is empowered by the Overseas Trade Acts to give guarantees in connection with the export of goods wholly or partly produced or manufactured in the United Kingdom. Such powers are administered by the Export Credits Guarantee Department in consultation with an Advisory Committee appointed for the purpose and consisting of experts in industry, banking and insurance.

The type of cover was first made available by the Export Credits Guarantee Department some two years ago. Since then the demand for it has been continually growing, and the Department's guarantee of sterling transfer is now established as a valuable and increasingly important factor in the development and extension of this country's export trade.

Five years ago the Department handled seven millions of exports from the United Kingdom and the volume of business increased rapidly until last year 45 millions was covered by the Department.

Exporters in their own interests should investigate the scheme which has been described as invaluable to any exporting house.

DARING ATLANTIC.

RETURN TRIP IN 40-YEAR SAILING BOAT

NOW BEGUN BY DUTCHMAN.

JOURNEY WILL TAKE 25 DAYS.

Ignoring this age of speed in which aeroplanes roar over the Atlantic to set new travel records, J. G. Kuijt, a retired planter of the Dutch East Indies, has left America in a 38-foot sailing boat for Holland.

With favourable winds for a non-stop sail to Zaandijk, near Amsterdam, he hopes to complete a four-cornered trip from Holland by way of Africa and South America in about a year. He expects to see the shores of Holland again in about 25 or 35 days.

Unable to find employment in Holland after 21 years in the East Indies, Kuijt, who is 59 years old, set out from Zaandijk on August 22 last with Dirk Hofman (21) as his crew.

They planned to sail around the world, but after several stops in Africa Hofman became violently ill with a tropical fever that lasted throughout a 71-day trip across the South Atlantic.

After a four-week delay at Paramaribo while Hofman was in hospital, Kuijt decided that too much time had been lost to continue a trip around the world—besides, he wanted to return to his wife and two children.

With an extra man on board, Eugene Heinz (23), a West Indian negro of Paramaribo, the sailing boat arrived at Staten Island on June 19.

PLANNED CAREER AS LECTURER.

The boat, named The Holland, is 40 years old.

With his savings Kuijt bought the old boat and fitted her up for a trip around the world, hoping that when he returned to Holland he would be able to earn a living by lecturing on the far-away places he had visited.

By easy stages he sailed to England, then down the French coast 27 days to Leixoes, Portugal, and in 29 more days to St. Louis, Senegal, French Africa.

After another short cruise to another Senegalese port, Dakar, he set his course to Dutch Guiana, along the coast of South America. Five days out from Dakar his young companion slumped over the tiller one night and was put to bed violently ill in the small cabin.

Kuijt shaved off the youth's hair and continually applied cold water to the top of his head. He painted a huge red cross on a sail and watched the horizon for a boat that might be able to give Hofman medical aid.

In the 71 days across the South Atlantic he said he saw only one boat a long way off and an aeroplane flying overhead. After a brief stop at Cayenne, French Guiana, they continued on to Paramaribo, arriving there on January 23.

When Hofman was better, Kuijt decided that it might be too much of a strain on the youth's health to continue on around the world, so he set his course for New York for a return to Holland.

There were still plenty of the stores of canned food from Holland when the boat arrived at Staten Island—enough for the return to Holland.

But Kuijt said he would have to buy some more cheese. He started out with 20 cheeses. The last slice was gone when they reached Paramaribo.

THE GARDENER'S CORNER

Plants Which Give Minimum Of Trouble

By "THE MAN WTH THE HOE"

THE cutting of hedges is now being done in many gardens. It is well to get this done before the growth hardens. Privet hedges if cut by a craftsman always are attractive. Several seen were pleasant to look at. Beech hedges generally only require neat trimming, but thorn require to be carefully cut to make a good job of it.

Topiary work is sometimes seen over the countryside and in large gardens, but this requires a specialist, and there are plants which are usually chosen for this purpose.

In herbaceous borders two very handsome flowered plants are now in bloom. One is gaillardia grandiflora, which is reddish purple and yellow, and the other coreopsis grandiflora, which is yellow. These plants belong to the same order as the daisy-compositæ. The common name for the gaillardia is blanket flower, named probably after its leaves, which are soft and warm. Both of these plants require to be staked early, as they grow fairly tall and straggly.

They may be increased by division or cuttings taken from the roots. These are put into shallow boxes in March. There are attractive annuals of both of these flowers.

A handsome climber, which is blooming freely at present, is solanum crispum. It has bluish purple flowers which are fragrant. The white flowered species S. jasminoides is also in bloom, which lasts all summer. Both of these plants are rapid growers when once established.

Greenhouse Species.

There are also several greenhouse species which are attractive for their berries in winter. One is the Star Capsicum, and the other Jerusalem Cherry. The berries of the former are scarlet, and those of the latter scarlet or yellow. The first is one to two feet in height, and the other two to four feet. They are both evergreens, and belong to the same order and family as the potatoe.

At a seaside cottage the pink oxalis is in full bloom in the sunshine. It is along the base of a wall, and looks bright. White butterflies occasionally alight upon its flowers. Those who have cottages or bungalows at the shore usually like plants which give them a minimum of trouble, as they are there for rest and recreation. Some flowers recommended for seaside gardens are Sea Pinks, Cerastiums, Carnations, especially cloves, which like the sandy soil, Gleam Nasturtiums, Anthemis, Large Daisies, Hydrangeas, Violas, and Calendulas. New Zealand flax grows well here, and soon makes a large clump for shelter. Escallonias, Veronicas, Seabuckthorn, and Elders are also suitable. And for shelter from the sun the common Sycamore is useful, and stands spray and storms well.

Lawns Now at Their Best.

Flowers seeds which were sown in five and six inch pots during July and placed on a garden walk are now well up, and ready for pricking out into boxes. They were Verbascums, Mimilus, Ribes, and Penstemons, Gypsophila Paniculata, Primulas, Trollius, and Oriental Poppy Hybrids which are in boxes are now ready for planting in a nursery bed or in some cases into their permanent quarters. This also applies to wallflowers which were sown in June.

Lawns which are constantly cut and rolled, and are kept clear of weeds and leaves look well now with the rain and sunshine which has prevailed this month. One seen at a new villa which had been carefully levelled and sown with the best lawn grass seed made one stop to admire it. This is perhaps the best way to get a good uniform lawn. A new bowling green was also noticed. The turves had been brought from a distance to lay it, and were no doubt specially adapted or prepared for the purpose. They made a very attractive green.

Montbretias are making a great show in many gardens. In a seaside cemetery a large clump of one of the tall flowering varieties, probably America, was seen. Its dark red colour was very attractive amid its sombre surrounding. The latest name for these plants is Tritonias.

The best known variety is Pottsu, which blooms this month. It has an orange yellow flower. The practice of growing Tritonias around the base of trees is getting more common, and they have also been seen growing in rough places where the grass is left uncut. Here it gives a patch of colour in a bleak spot. A pink variety was seen, and T. rosea with its red and yellow flowers is handsome, and is suitable for indoor decoration in vases.

INCREASE IN CAR EXPORTS.

FALL IN PRODUCTION AND SALES.

Exports of private cars for the seven months ended July, 1938, show an increase of 1,000 units over the corresponding period for 1937. There has been, however, a decrease in the number of commercial vehicles exported for this period of over 3,000 units, although the total value for this class rose by over £6,000.

On the other hand, imports into this country of all classes of motor vehicles during these seven months were more than 5,000 less than in 1937.

The total production of private cars for the nine months ended June showed a decrease of approximately 10 per cent. on the corresponding period for last year, the figures being 275,000 in 1938, as against 309,000 last year. The percentage is similar for commercial vehicles, the drop being from 91,000 in 1937, to 82,000 in 1938.

Home sales of private cars during the month of June were well below those of June, 1937, though the latter was a peak month, holding the highest proportion that June has ever held in recorded annual sales.

The drop in home sales has had practically no effect at all on the number of motor vehicles in use, and it is estimated that last month there were 170,000 more private cars on the roads than in July, 1937.

RACING ON WINDERMERE.

COUNTY COUNCIL PROTEST.

Protest against Lake Windermere being turned into a racing track for record bids by speedboats was made at yesterday's meeting of Westmorland County Council at Kendal.

Councillor N. F. Wilson, of Crosthwaite, asked if that authority had any power to regulate motor-boat racing on Windermere.

"It is a terrible pity that this most beautiful lake should be turned into a racing track," he said. "I wondered whether we might have had some power to put a spoke in their wheels."

The Chairman (Alderman G. H. Pattinson), of Windermere, said that the lake was a highway, and as such was under the jurisdiction of Windermere Urban Council and the Lakes Urban Council.

The Clerk (Mr. H. B. Greenwood) said that their Council had no authority in the matter.

WOMEN WHO PLAYED "HOUSE."

"House," the old Army gambling game, has apparently caught on with certain women in Glasgow.

Eight married women, two single women ,and two men appeared at a police court on Friday in connection with playing this game in a back court, and each was fined 7s 6d, or five days' imprisonment.

"GIRLS WILL BE GUYS"

Critic Of Feminine Apparel

MISS 1938 ON SEA FRONT

Sir,—It is to be feared that "J.H.C.," by his reference to long-trousered females, has left himself open to diatribes involving such epithets as prude, old-fashioned, etc. If he has observed the gradual retrogression in womanly fashions during recent years he should by this time be immune from any shock or surprise. The whole tendency in feminine apparel and personal appearance is to sacrifice goot taste, common decency and true charm in a desperate attempt to achieve notoriety and "showmanship." So much so that we sometimes ask ourselves if the limit has not been reached or in what new excesses women will permit themselves to indulge in their pitiful imitations of screen "lovelies."

The unhappy results of this mimicry are shown in the bizarre and ghastly "creations" that are to-day everywhere in evidence. Take a look at Miss 1938 in holiday attire as she strolls languidly along the seafront in long navy blue trousers of a pattern that would cause any sailor to avert his eyes in horror. Hanging negligently from cleverly painted lips (a real art this) is the inevitable cigarette (with or without ivory holder). The spectacle is completed with a bored expression, cunningly plucked eyebrows and flamboyant finger nails. Could a more ghastly caricature of real beauty be possibly conceived. We in Ulster must congratulate ourselves that this sort of thing is confined to the "extremists," but the bacilli may spread. However, time, the great healer, may produce a healthier mentality in the fair sex. In the meantime, if confronted with any of these "ugly sights or ghastly dreams," let us merely shrug our shoulders philosophically, for in spite of us "girls will be guys."—Yours, etc.,

"F.E.W."

ANOTHER POINT OF VIEW.

Sir,—If you would be good enough to spare me even a smaller space than "J.H.C." has taken I would also like to air my views on the dress of ladies at the seaside this summer.

I notice he describes them as females. From my own point of view and that of many observers I would venture to say that the long-trousered females" have been greatly admired by locals and tourists.

Perhaps if "J.H.C." had been walking in shorts he would have left himself open to criticism.—Yours, etc., "C.V.R."

RELIGION FIFTY YEARS HENCE.

Sir,—Mr. Shaw Desmond's prophecy re above may, in all likelihood, come to pass. It has already gone much beyond the incipient stage. Clearly, he is writing as a man of the world in whom the wish is father to the thought. He has gripped the popular idea. His horizon is bounded by the fleshly mind. It is, perhaps, well to have this prophecy from some source. The same—if it were possible—issuing from "enlightened understanding" would needs prepare to endure torrents of abuse and cascades of scornful invectives. It is difficult discovering such a prophet's method of studying Scripture, than which there is nothing having such important bearing upon the subject of his article.

One or two stock citations that social badinage has familiarised to us, does not reveal the student. A glib reference to the Sermon on the Mount is often taken to denote exhaustive knowledge of all New Testament teaching. The parson and the priest are now only artificially distinguished from the politician and the social reformer. They have long since ceased to be "men for God." Scrupulous ritualists and slavish formalists though they be, that doesn't even bear the relation to "worship, truly in Spirit," that a shell does to an egg. World reform as such is a scheme altogether outside the ambit of the Gospel of Grace. God isn't going to mend the world. He will end it, and make a new one. Only in some countries as yet is He refused interference in His own things. Desmond's materialised prophecy admits Him on sufferance pro tem. He would probably be allowed to abet our schemes, and aid our plans, anything else and again ascends the cry "We won't have you reign over us." Things are moving fast. The man of sin—the coming world opposer—will find a great following, but his worship will be of short duration.—Yours, etc.,

"CIVICUS."

BOUNDARY EXTENSION.

Sir,—I, as an oppressed ratepayer, am perfectly satisfied that Alderman Pierce is altogether wrong in his opinion that the ratepayers of Belfast desire extension of the City boundary and I challenge these alleged representatives of the people who voted for the extension to take a plebiscite of the inhabitants before deciding on extension. I am sure that the people would rather pay the cost of a plebiscite than add a supposititious sum of 2½d. which is patently a derisory estimate. For my part I will have much pleasure not only in voting but working against the "alleged representatives" of the wards where I have a vote who are in favour of the boundary extension.—Yours, etc.,

"QUANTUM SUFF."

DONAGHADEE "DISGUSTED."

Sir,—I was pleased to see in your issue of the 18th inst. a letter protesting against the wearing of trousers by females. I think it is high time all sensible people showed their disapproval in no uncertain manner against this innovation. I have observed several in Donaghadee wearing men's trousers now—I presume their fathers or brothers.

One can only come to the conclusion that these girls must have a peculiar mental twist, causing them to look like a sort of hybrid—half man and half women—otherwise they would not make themselves so ridiculous in the eyes of the public.

How any sensible young man can be seen in their company, unless he be a "cissie," is beyond my comprehension. It may be their parents have a similar kink in their brains when they allow their girls to make an exhibition of themselves on the public roads.—Yours, etc., "DISGUSTED."

At the Crumlin Picture House the feature for Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday will be "The Man from the Big City," depicting the gay and amusing adventures of a dude from the East, who gets among the bad men of the West, and shows them that real villainy is not gun-play alone. NEW B.A. PRESIDENT

SIR A. SEWARD ELECTED.

VISITING BELFAST IN 1941.

Sir Albert Seward has been elected president of the Dundee meeting of the British Association next year.

Sir Albert is Professor of Botany at Cambridge, Master of Downing College, and a former Vice-Chancellor of the University. He is 74 years of age.

The General Committee of the association elected Professor C. Spearman (Psychology) and Dr. C. R. Fay (Economics) to membership of the Council.

Their election was supported in view of the recent establishment of a new division of the association for the study of the social relations of science.

Invitations for future meetings of the association have been received from Newcastle (1940), Belfast (1941), and Birmingham (1942).

INFANTILE PARALYSIS.

TWO CASES IN NOTTINGHAM.

Two cases of infantile paralysis have been discovered in Nottingham, and are now under treatment at the City Isolation Hospital.

The condition of one of the patients —a boy—is serious.

The Nottingham medical officer of health, Dr. Cyril Banks, states that the cases are unconnected, coming from quite different parts of the city, and he sees no reason to fear an epidemic.

"In fact," he says, "but for the Essex outbreak I do not suppose that any notice would have been taken of them."

SOUNDED CALL FOR ULSTER DIVISION

IN THIEPVAL CHARGE.

BELFASTMAN KILLED

VICTIM OF QUARRY EXPLOSION.

Mr. George Ernest Pritchard, of Deerpark Drive, Belfast, the man who sounded the call for the Ulster Division to go over the top on July 1, 1916, met a shocking death at a quarry of which he was manager at Horseshoe Road, near Ligoniel, on Friday night.

As a result of an explosion his body was terribly mutilated. His left side and part of the head were blown away, while on the other side of the road lay deceased's left hand.

No person was present in the quarry at the time of the tragedy, but five men had been working there before the accident occurred.

Deceased had the key of the building in which the high explosives for blasting purposes are, and it is thought he was carrying a quantity of the explosives when he met his death.

The body of Mr. Pritchard was discovered at 9-30 p.m. by Andrew Keating, of Lime Cottage, which is situated near the quarry. He heard what he thought was a gun shot. It was raining heavily at the time and after it had ceased he went on a message and on his way he made the alarming discovery.

He was removing a stick at the entrance to the quarry when he noticed a body lying a few yards from him—which turned out to be the mutilated remains of Mr. Pritchard.

Later Robert M'Cormick, the foreman, was informed by Keating of the terrible event and on hurrying to the scene he identified the body. All that was recognisable of the clothes that deceased had been wearing was a pair of flannel trousers.

The police were notified and Sergeant Boyd and Constable Wallace at once visited the place. Shortly afterwards District Inspector Moffatt arrived and remained at the place until a late hour. The police have no suspicion of foul play.

AN ARDENT MOTOR CYCLIST.

Mr. Pritchard's tragic death has occasioned widespread regret among a large circle of friends, particularly in motoring circles. He was a keen motor cyclist, and had arranged with a friend to be present at the Grand Prix race this afternoon.

His father, the late Captain Pritchard, had been master of one of the Head Line boats, and during the war he had some dramatic experiences. His ship on one occasion was torpedoed

In the Great War Mr. Pritchard had the distinction of sounding the bugle call to advance on the historic morning of July 1, 1916, when the Ulster Division won unending fame for the gallantry they displayed when they went "over the top" at the Battle of the Somme.

When residing at Greenisland he joined a service battalion of the Royal Irish Rifles as a boy bugler. He served throughout the Great War, and on leaving the Army he joined the clerical staff of the old firm of Messrs. Workman, Clark. Later he received an appointment as a salesman with the Shell Petrol Co. before its union with the B.P. Co.

On leaving that position he became manager of the quarry on the Horseshoe Road, where his promising career—he was only about 40 years of age—has ended under such distressing circumstances.

He leaves a wife and two young children. Two of his sisters hold responsible positions in the city, while his brother James is in the stockbroking business in London.

£3,700,000 PALACE FOR RUSSIA.

WILL TOWER 1,300 FEET.

TO BE BUILT ON CATHEDRAL SITE.

The Soviet Government has assigned 100,000,000 rubles (about £3,780,000) for work this year on the gigantic palace of the Soviets being built on the site of St. Saviour's Cathedral in Moscow (says a Moscow message).

It has also announced that the palace will be opened on November 7, 1942, the 25th anniversary of the Bolshevist revolution.

The building cannot possibly be completed by that date, but that is the present aim.

Plans for the palace have been repeatedly changed, but at present they call for a pyramidal skyscraper in ascending circular terraces surmounted by a colossal figure of Lenin 325 feet high.

The total height of the structure and statue is set at 1,365 feet. The building is to have a base 460 feet in diameter and its main hall is designed to hold 20,000 persons.

It is to be built of reinforced concrete and a special rustless steel, and will contain 148 elevators and 62 escalators.

A special lighting system based on British patents is now being planned.

The structure—117 feet higher than the Empire State Building in New York —is expected to reach the clouds that hover over Moscow.

Soviet experts, in fact, have estimated that on only 90 days out of the year will the head of the Lenin statue be clearly visible from the ground.

BIG DUNDALK FIRE.

PREMISES COMPLETELY DESTROYED.

EARLY MORNING OUTBREAK

NOTABLE RESCUE WORK.

Damage running into thousands of pounds was caused by a fire which broke out in Clanbrassil Street, Dundalk, in the early hours of this morning.

A three-storeyed building, of which the drapery premises of Messrs. Connolly & Soraghan formed a portion, was completely gutted, as was also an extensive annex at the rear.

The outbreak was discovered by Mr. Peter Richardson, night watchman of Messrs. Carroll's tobacco factory, who gave the alarm, and in a short time that firm's hoses were playing on the building.

Civic Guards Gaffney and Haverty, who were on itght patrol, were quickly on the scene, and with the aid of civilians roused eight or nine people sleeping in rooms on and adjacent to the burning premises.

Those in the building itself were speedily got out, but difficulty was experienced in reaching a number who resided on the top portion of the next-door premises, known as O'Connell's Wine Vaults, in which the Dundalk Business Men's Club is also located.

In this case volumes of dense smoke and fumes from the burning building, entering through the windows, filled the stairway, but eventually all reached safety.

The Dundalk Fire Brigade fought the flames for some hours, but so rapidly did the fire spread that their efforts had largely to be directed to saving the adjoining property.

At one time the roof of the Dundalk Examiner Press, Ltd., building became involved, and a considerable portion was destroyed.

During the fire the guards removed to a place of safety the files and other books from the "Examiner" office, and also stationery goods from the shop of Miss Hanratty, which is in the same building.

Before ten o'clock this morning some portions over Messrs. Connolly & Soraghan's shop rollapsed with an immense crash, following which there was a further flare up. Members of the Brigade returned and subdued this further outbreak.

LINEN TRADE REVIEW

Paramount Importance Of U.S.A. Business

Chief Item In This Year's Decline—Diminished American Demand — Telling Statistics — Coming Advertising Campaign—Its Character And Aims—Export Returns For July—Better Than June—Detailed Analysis—Export Credits Office For Belfast.

(By a Special Correspondent).

T ek a prominent Ulster linen ufacturer confessed to me most the first time in the his firm, he had not a single books for the U.S.A. The ndling in Transatlantic linen n has been a source of serious all in the industry, at home d, for many months. The U.S.A. imports of linen and products, from all sources, in six months of this year were only 9,561,000 dollars as compared with such imports in January to 1937 of 16,197,000 dollars; or as d with imports in the first half year 1936 of 18,583,831 dollars. ndication of the gravity of the confronting linen exporters to greatest market for linens.

Huge Decline.

United Kingdom linen ex- e first seven months of this ter the huge decline of and it is noteworthy that tion in U.S.A. purchases of damasks, and handker- ne is directly accountable for of this shrinkage. Similarly, which imports Ulster linen and sheers for embroidery for S.A. market, has cut down her of these goods by £189,254 first seven months of this year compared with the corresponding figures. Thus these two countries are responsible for almost a pound shrinkage in United Kingdom linen exports this year. Probably the diminished demand for linen in the United States is due in no small measure to the fact that American importers believe that linen duties will be pruned in the Anglo-U.S.A. trade talks, and are rationing their requisitions accordingly. Amongst factors which are doubtless playing their part is the wide gap between flax and cotton values, and to the comparative depression in America. We blame the Japanese for the wane in Chinese linen buying, but is it not strange that U.S.A. linen importers have not switched over some at least of their cloth to some other making-up centre, such as Madeira, outside the war zone? Madeira imported United Kingdom linen piece-goods to the value of only £36,017 in the first seven months of this year, as against £55,637 in the corresponding period of 1937.

American linen importers maintain that the root cause of the decline in linen consumption in the States is due to linen losing ground to rival fabrics, and they attach great importance to the fact that neither the silk, rayon, wool, nor cotton industries have suffered the 41 per cent. decline from the previous half-year, that U.S.A. statistics show for linen.

Letter From U.S.A.

Three weeks ago I drew attention to the "sustained promotional advertising campaign" which the (New York) Linen Trade Association is planning to launch in the States. Mr. Herbert Swann, chairman of the newly-formed Linen Promotional Campaign Committee, has now sent me full particulars of the new plan, and I note with pleasure that an integral part of the scheme is that U.S.A. linen importers should put up half the money, and Irish, Belgian and Czecho-Slovakian linen exporters the remainder.

Mr. Swann, who is President of Samuel Lamont & Sons (New York), Ltd., and treasurer of the Linen Trade Association, has written me as follows on the subject:—

"Past experience has amply proved that a revival of the justified popularity of linens of all descriptions will not come as a miracle, nor be brought about by a shot-in-the-arm effort of brief duration on the part of a few of the large firms in the trade. Particularly is this true when all other textiles, with the sole exception of linens, are being systematically promoted and given regular publicity year after year. The advent of spun rayon is a factor not lightly to be ignored. Promotional campaigns, if worth while and carried out vigorously, cost money. It is obvious that just a few of the more important firms cannot do the job. An effective programme can be put into immediate operation if every linen importer large and small, as well as European producers in Northern Ireland, Belgium, and Czecho-Slovakia, promptly agrees to support our proposed promotional campaign. While the linen trade cannot afford to spend hundreds of thousands of dollars annually to promote its products in the United States, as do rival textile industries, we should be able to support a modest, intelligent promotional effort for the next few years. If it does not succeed, let us resign ourselves to gradual decadence—and advise our sons to prepare for some other line of business."

For a Period of Years.

Accordingly the New York Linen Trade Association proposes that an industry-wide promotional campaign be launched forthwith, this to continue for a period of years. The Association Committee has prepared careful plans involving time-testing methods, and the cost for the first year of effort is estimated at 30,000 dollars. This sum, it is pointed out, represents less than one-tenth of one per cent. of the invoice value of total U.S.A. linen imports in 1937. In fact it is merely one-half of one per cent. of the decrease in U.S.A. linen imports in the first half of this year as compared with the corresponding figures for 1937. Mr. Swann informs me that already substantial support has been pledged by leading New York h has proved another depressing n Bedford Street, remarkable only me sales of coarse tow yarns and at uneconomic prices. A fair ty of 12's and 16's tow wefts are have changed hands at 15s 3d 12s 3d respectively, a decline of 3d per bundle on previous quotations.

Senior members of the trade recall the time when 25's wefts were as low as 6s per bundle or even less. We are sometimes apt to forget, however, that when 6s was the price of 25's yarn we were on the gold standard and wages were very much lower than now. To-day's price of 10s for 25's is sterling price and equivalent to around 6s gold. There is an absolute minimum to which yarn levels can fall, and surely this has now been attained. Recovery is long overdue, and may come with surprising suddenness. Cloth buyers should hold back no longer and get in while the going is good. Recent transactions have been mainly of a hand-to-mouth character, with some demand for buckrams and hollands for the tailoring trade. Damask sales continue very disappointing, and it is evident that this section is encountering intensive competition from high-grade cotton fabrics and rayon mixture cloths. Linen men are fettered by the scarcity and high prices of their raw material, while cotton and rayon producers have no such worries. For the moment, at any rate, cotton is ousting linen in such goods as kitchen and glass cloths, and the popularly-priced dressed fabrics. The foreign flax monopolies gaily continue to force prices upwards, and the Ulster spinner is in a dilemma. His fibre stocks are growing somewhat low, but present trading does not justify replenishment. Flax prices, on the other hand, are buoyant, and should attain further heights when there is a revival in business. Last week the Latvian monopoly sold a few hundred tons, and tow values, in particular, are firm and tending dearer. Some surprise was occasioned by the announcement this week that the German flax area has shrunk from 132,135 acres in 1937 to 115,095 acres this season. Quality of the German crop is believed to be poor, and it is significant that German spinners have of late been very active in the Courtrai market, where they have been buying the choicest grades. Recently Irish spinners have been important buyers of average quality flax and tow on the Courtrai market.

Flax and Tow Values.

Nominal flax and tow values—Fourth Group Slanetz, basis 1, £87 to £88; Ralo tow No. 8, £68 to £69 per ton; Latvian-Livonian R, £71 10s to £72 10s; Werro-Petschory Halves R, £70 to £71; Lithuanian R, Group 1, £62 to £65. All per ton c.i.f. United Kingdom. Nominal values in Ulster of machine-hackled water-retted tows, medium quality, are as follows:—Courtrai, £63 (roughing); £67 (No. 1), £71 (No. 2), and £75 (Nos. 3 and 4); Irish, £57 (roughing); £60 (No. 1), £63 (No. 2), £66 (Nos. 3 and 4); Baltic £52 (roughing); £54 (No. 1), £55 (No. 2), and £58 (Nos. 3 and 4), all per ton. Nominal Irish linen yarn values:—Sheer warps 90's to 110's 7s 4d; 150's, 8s 6d per bundle. Cambric warps, 75's to 85's, 7s 4½d per bundle; 100's, 7s 9d per bundle. Tow wefts, 12's, 15s 3d per bundle; 14's, 13s 3d per bundle, and 40's, 7s 6d per bundle. Line wefts, 40's, 8s 9d per bundle; 50's, 7s 9d; 80's, to 130's, 6s 9d per bundle; 140's, 6s 10½d, and 150's, 7s 1½d per bundle. All per bundle of 60,000 yards of grey yarn, average quality, subject to usual trade discounts. Nominal Scottish dry spun linen yarn values:—Tow weft, 3lbs., 2s 11d per spindle; 3½lbs., 3s 2d per spindle; 4lbs., 3s 5d per spindle. Tow warp, 3½lbs., 3s 7d per spindle; 4lbs., 3s 10d; 5lbs., 4s 6d; 2½lbs., 3s 5d; and 3lbs., 3s 11d per spindle. Flax warp, 4lbs. to 5lbs., 1s 3d per lb.; 2½lbs. flax, 3-ply, 1s 8d per lb.; 2lbs., 3-ply, 1s 6d per lb. Under the Scotch system of yarn numbering the yarn number indicates the weight of a spindle or spangle of 48 cuts, or 14,400 yards.

Lancashire cotton spinners and manufacturers complain of a dearth of new business and a lack of declaration against old orders. Price-testing rather than actual business is a feature of the cotton cloth market, due to the present state of tension upon the Continent and to the war-clouds hovering over the East.

Accurate Barometer.

The export returns for July, released this week by the Board of Trade, show that United Kingdom linen exports last month bettered the June figures by £52,975, but they still compare very unfavourably with the corresponding returns for 1937. This accurate linen trade barometer reveals that last month the United Kingdom exported linen goods to the value of £422,065 as against £616,520 in July of last year. Linen exports from the United Kingdom in the first seven months of this year amounted to £3,223,260 as against £4,627,852 in the corresponding period of 1937. On analysing this huge drop of £1,404,592 in seven months' trading we find that over a million pounds (£1,001,181 to be exact) applies to the piece-goods section. United States purchases of piece-goods declined by £677,364 during this period, and those of China by £189,254, or a total drop of £866,618 in the buying of linen piece-goods by these two countries jointly. We are fortunate in that we can rely upon steady buying by the British Dominions, who last month absorbed over 40 per cent. of our total exports of linen piece-goods, damasks and handkerchiefs.

South Africa, Australia, British India and "other British countries," excluding Canada and New Zealand, are the only markets which have increased their purchases of linen piece-goods this year. South Africa's purchases of piece-goods last month were disappointing, as they declined to £13,534 as against £15,038 last month and £25,980 a year ago. Nevertheless, South Africa has bought well during 1938, her piece-goods purchases up to July 31 totalling £147,430 as against £105,099 in the corresponding period of 1937. In July India purchased U.K. linen piece-goods to the value of £13,121 as against £10,679 in the previous month and £9,465 a year ago. India purchased from us linen piece-goods worth £77,635 in the first seven months of this year as against £69,961 in the corresponding period of 1937. Last month Australia purchased linen piece-goods worth £46,750 in June and £46,707 in July, 1937. In the first seven months of this year Australia purchased from us piece-goods worth £260,070 as against £235,138 in the corresponding period of 1937, or an increase of £22,932.

Hopeful Section.

"Other British countries" absorbed piece-goods worth £10,705 last month, compared with £14,020 in June, and £16,661 a year ago. Nevertheless, these Colonies have bought from us piece-goods valued at £181,064 this year as against £143,933 in the first seven months of 1937.

Concerning other markets, our linen piece-goods shipments this year, up to July 31, 1938, reveal the following shrinkages as compared with the equivalent 1937 figures:—New Zealand, £4,029; Canada, £36,130; Cuba, £37,301; Brazil, £30,171; Madeira, £19,620; Argentine, £22,115, and "other foreign countries," £150,265.

Shipments of damask table linen to U.S.A. are down by £85,885 in the first seven months of this year as compared with the corresponding period of 1937, while in the same period U.S.A. purchases of U.K. linen handkerchiefs declined by £32,611.

The sales difficulties encountered abroad by our linen thread manufacturers are reflected in the fact that last month our exports of finished thread totalled £25,890 as against £31,776 in the previous month and £40,647 in July, 1937. Flax and hemp yarns valued at £54,497 were exported last month as against £80,712 a year ago. Shipments of towels, canvas and "other linen and hemp manufacturers" also show noteworthy declines.

Last month the United Kingdom imported linen piece-goods worth £9,234, an increase of £1,620; "other linen manufactures" worth £3,123, a decrease of £14,194; flax and tow yarns worth £4,545, a decrease of £8,799; flax worth £131,945, an increase of £15,855, and flax tow or codilla worth £31,234, an increase of £5,321.

Export Credits for Linen.

This week the Export Credits Guarantee Department opened a branch office in Belfast, and this enterprise should be welcomed by linen, yarn and thread exporters. The practice hitherto has been for the official in Glasgow to pay occasional visits to Belfast, but the establishment of a permanent office in "Linenopolis" should clearly be more helpful than spasmodic trips. It is stated that the Government feel that there is room for expansion in all Northern Ireland exports, linen in particular. The function of the Government-controlled Exports Credits organisation is, of course, to finance approved shipments to countries where payments are delayed.

"G.O.M." OF ENGLISH LINEN DEAD.

FROM KEADY TO YORKSHIRE

OVER 70 YEARS IN TRADE.

An Ulster link with the English linen industry has been severed by the passing of Mr. Henry William Carson, possibly the oldest member of the British linen trade. Born in Keady (Co. Armagh) in 1856, Mr. Carson entered the employment of an Armagh linen weaving factory at an unusually early age and eventually became manager.

In 1882 he decided to seek his fortune in Yorkshire, then a flourishing English linen centre, and secured the managership of the weaving department of Marshall's, of Leeds, a pioneer power-loom firm which is now extinct. Five years later, Mr. Carson, who had by this time gained a unique reputation in Yorkshire linen circles, was offered a partnership in Waltons, of Knaresborough, a linen firm which dates back to 1785, and was soon managing director of that concern. At that time hand-loom weaving was still in vogue in Knaresborough. Right up to the date of his retirement, seven months ago, Mr. Carson kept up his custom of walking down to the factory in time to start at eight o'clock in the morning. The townsfolk used to set their clocks by him.

For 50 years he lived in Yorkshire, but his accent never lost its Ulster flavour. He bought his yarns in Belfast, and in business he was known as keen, but his keenness was marked by a Quaker-like honesty. He proved a father to his workers, and they turned out in force at his funeral.

Over 70 years of linen weaving! Surely that is a record? Seven years ago Mr. and Mrs. Carson celebrated their golden wedding. Mrs. Carson survives this grand old man of the linen trade, who was proud of his Ulster origin and of the fact that he made linens for the Royal Household from Ulster yarn. Incidentally, the present manager of the factory is Mr. Charles E. Downey, formerly of Bessbrook.

WORK AMONG BLIND IN AMERICA.

HEAD OF U.S. ORGANISATION

WINDING UP VISIT TO ULSTER.

An interesting visitor to Northern Ireland this week was Mr. R. B. Irwin, of New York, who is the executive director of the American Foundation for the Blind, the senior organisation of its kind in the United States, its work dealing with the welfare of 130,000 blind persons. It corresponds to the National Institute for the Blind in Great Britain.

Mr. Irwin lost his sight at the age of five. He graduated at Harvard, and has become head of the most important organisation caring for blind persons. His grandfather came from Ballymoney, which Mr. Irwin visited this week for the first time.

He is in Europe in his capacity as a trustee in the United States of the Moontype Printing Society, London, whose publications have a wide circulation among blind persons in America. He has also visited centres of work for the blind in Great Britain, Sweden, and France.

AT THE BELFAST FACTORY.

In Belfast Mr. Irwin was met by Mr. William Sweeney, a member of the Blind Persons' Committee of the Belfast Corporation, and visited the Lawnbrook Avenue Factory of the Workshops for the Blind, where Mr. George Sherman, the manager, explained the special work carried on.

Mr. Irwin was particularly intrested in wiredrawn brushes and knitted wear. The latter, he said, would perhaps have a market in the United States if smart designs were used.

During his visit he has been in contact with linen manufacturers with a view to importing quantities of linen towelling.

"Our intention," he told the "Telegraph," "is to buy material of special design in bulk, and distribute it to other organisations whose workers are engaged in hemming."

The American Foundation is a national organisation carrying on research work to find new methods of teaching and employing the blind with the aid of new appliances. They also conduct negotiations on behalf of the blind with the U.S. Government. One of its inventions has been books by gramophone, each record of a series taking half an hour to play.

Mr. Irwin returns to New York to-morrow from Queenstown.

THE MARRIAGE AGE

NOW OVER 30 FOR WOMEN.

According to official statistics compiled by the Ministry of Labour from insurance records, the majority of women in Great Britain and Ulster do not wed until they have passed 30 years of age, nowadays.

This is a change from the last inquiry on this subject, made by the Ministry a few years ago, when it was stated that the popular age for marrying was round about 24.

It would seem, therefore, that men seeking partners for life nowadays wish them to be of a settled state of mind rather than desiring youthful looks.

About 70 per cent. of insured women are under 30, the fall in the number over 30 being due to marrying.

There are more men under 25 years of age in the South-East of England than in any other part of the country.

FIVE TOURISTS VANISH.

PARIS, Friday.—Five French tourists, including two women, have disappeared while on an excursion into the Pyrenees near the Franco-Spanish frontier, states the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post" correspondent.

The tourists, who were due to return to Duchon on Tuesday, were seen the previous day on the Remune Pass, which is in Spain, and they are reported to have been arrested by the Nationalist authorities. A party searched the mountains for them yesterday without success.

The French authorities have been informed of their disappearance.

DOUGLAS CORRIGAN BEAUTY EXPERT.

NO MISTAKE THIS TIME.

THE IDEAL COLLEGE GIRL.

Douglas Corrigan, the "by mistake" Atlantic flyer, is considered to have made no mistake in defining "America's ideal college girl"—one of the tasks set for him following his return from England.

"The ideal girl should be bright in spirit as well as in mentality," he said, solemnly.

"She should not try to copy film stars or anyone else for that matter, for the American college girl is the most beautiful in the world. She should always look and be her own sweet self.

"The only ideal a girl should try to follow is her own mother. She should try to make use of her education to make her a better wife and mother."

So great was the interest aroused by Corrigan's definition that a nation-wide search for his ideal is to be made.

A big store is organising the competition and a scholarship will be awarded to the winner.

LOST ALL NINE LIVES AT ONCE.

Out of simple curiosity as to what lay below, a black cat pushed open a small flap in a cement door and leapt down.

There was an explosion, main parts of the Ultimo Power Station here were demolished, electrical current in the city stopped, electric tramway services came to a standstill, and thousands had to walk to their work.

The cat was found lying dead on the floor of the power station, its fur badly singed. Near it were high power switch bars through which pass 6,600 volts. Engineers thought the cat should have been blown to pieces.

WAY DOWN IN OLD KENTUCKY.

The people of Kentucky know all about horses, and there is little about the subject that can surprise them. Nevertheless they stood astonished when they saw two grown men rodeoing down a main street.

The incident occurred at Lone Oak, and the man who caused all the commotion was Mr. L. Page. He was riding in a saddle strapped on to the back of a friend, Mr. T. H. Coleman.

Page had bet Coleman that a certain Senator would win the local election. He won, and Coleman discharged his obligation by carrying Page down the township's main road.

THE MARCH OF SCIENCE.

The march of science proceeds apace in America, and soon it appears there will be few undertakings that cannot be carried out by machinery.

The latest invention is a machine that cleans sewers. Speaking recently, the President of the Borough of Manhattan (New York) predicted that within the next few years the Council's sewers, which were nearly 600 miles in length, would all be cleaned by machinery.

His forecast was based on results which had been achieved with two machines which had been in experimental use for the last two months. Workers enter the sewers to put the apparatus in motion. They do not themselves do the actual cleaning.

The President added that in spite of the introduction of machinery no labour would be displaced. It would mean that sewers would be cleaned more frequently and more regularly.

HARD LABOUR FOR DRUNKARDS.

Compulsory hard labour for drunkards "so that this activity may serve as a means of regeneration" has been revived by the Chilian Government.

All persons convicted of being drunk, states an official circular, are to be taken over the local municipalities and made to work on a task of public utility—without pay.

This represents a return to the time-honoured system by which persons arrested for offences against sobriety were obliged to "do time" on the public roads in the face of all the world.—Reuter.

SWAM WRONG WAY—DROWNED.

Apparently believing he was making for the shore, although all the time he was going further out, a blind man swimming in a river here (says a Windsor, Ontario, message) swam until he became exhausted and was drowned.

Three sightless companions in a boat near him were unable to help despite instructions from the only member of the party able to see, a 10-year-old boy.—Reuter.

THE JAPS ALARMED AT CHINA HOLD-UP

REPRIEVE FOR HANKOW

WAR MATERIAL CAPTURED

PATHETIC SIDE OF WARFARE

Japanese circles in China are becoming increasingly alarmed at the continued failure of the Japanese forces to break through the defences of Hankow in the Yangtse Valley.

ON THE SOUTH BANK OF THE RIVER THE JAPANESE ARE HELD UP AT KIUKIANG, SOME 140 MILES FROM THEIR OBJECTIVE, AND ON THE NORTH BANK AT HUANGMEI.

IT IS GENERALLY AGREED THAT BOTH FORCES MUST BE HEAVILY REINFORCED BEFORE A LARGE SCALE OFFENSIVE CAN BE LAUNCHED WITH ANY CHANCE OF SUCCESS.

CHINESE CONFIDENCE GROWS.

The fall of Hankow, which a month ago was generally forecast for the end of August, is not expected before the middle of October at the earliest.

As days pass confidence grows among the officers of the Chinese Military Headquarters.

Large quantities of Japanese supplies have been captured—machine-guns, gas masks, rifles, swords, and officers' revolvers, as well as many good luck charms and letters taken from dead Japanese.

A pathetic sight at Headquarters Offices is the many photographs bearing loving inscriptions to fathers who will never return.

The Chinese officer who showed the collection to a P.A. correspondent picked up one of the photographs and said quietly, "We have no quarrel with these men, but when we are attacked we are forced to defend ourselves. We soldiers know what war means and we hate it, but we are fighting the world's battle against the military."

A diary found on the body of a dead Japanese revealed that Chinese guns had scored a direct hit on brigade headquarters of the Japanese 106th Division a few days ago, wounding a colonel and killing ten officers.—P.A. Foreign Special.

BATTLE ON YELLOW RIVER?

TOKIO, Saturday.—The possibility of a pitched battle along the banks of the Yellow River is mentioned in Japanese Press messages.

Reports state that about 100,000 Chinese troops are massing in the north of Honah Province.

Twenty-two Chinese divisions are said to be guarding the western section of the Lunghai Railway, which runs through the north of Honan Province to the south of the Yellow River.

More Chinese troops are reported to be on their way to this front from other centres.

The Japanese hold a number of points to the north of the Yellow River, including Puchow, the southern terminus of the Tatung-Puchow Railway.—Press Association Foreign Special.

CHINA INVINCIBLE

SAYS GERMAN GENERAL

COULD WAGE WAR 50 YEARS

"TIME WILL BEAT JAPAN."

BERLIN, Friday.—General von Falkenhausen, head of the German Military Mission in China which was recently recalled, has arrived in Berlin with his wife. For three years he has been working in close contact with General Chiang Kai-shek.

It is understood to be General von Falkenhausen's opinion that China is completely unconquerable, and that she could wage war for 50 years if necessary (wires the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post" correspondent).

The Japanese cannot produce new recruits indefinitely, and the Chinese of the occupied areas will never fight against their own countrymen.

In the view of Gen. von Falkenhausen and his colleagues, Japan's greatest enemy is the passage of time. They are certain that in five years Japan will be forced to withdraw her armies from China. The Chinese army, which is far better trained and equipped than the Japanese expected, is playing the part of the Russian armies during Napoleon's Moscow campaign. The Japanese troops, harried by guerilla tactics, are gradually being whittled away.

JAPANESE MINISTER ON WAR.

In an interview with the "Voelkischer Beobachter," official organ of the Nazi Party, Gen. Itagaki, Japanese Minister of War, states that the Japanese General Staff expect to capture Hankow very shortly The Japanese would, however, never cease their military operations until the fall of the Chiang Kai-Shek Government, which "works with the Comintern against Japan."

"If Chiang Kai-Shek resolves to continue the struggle after the fall of Hankow," states General Itagaki, "we shall continue to fight until we have completely annihilated the Chinese resistance." Diplomatic negotiation with Chiang Kai-Shek was useless.

Questioned about the Russo-Japanese Changkufeng dispute, General Itagaki declared that this question was a purely local one. The Japanese had frequently proposed a Joint Border Commission to examine the frontier issue, but owing to the attitude of the Soviet authorities the project had never been realised. He did not believe that the U.S.S.R. wanted war with Japan at present.

The resistance of the Japanese people, concluded General Itagaki, grew as the difficulties increased. "The more opposition we meet with," he stated, "the greater will the strength of our nation become."

GIRL BATTALION COMMANDER.

HAS RISEN FROM RANKS.

HER GALLANTRY AT HANCHOW.

CANTON, Saturday.—Canton newspapers are enthusiastic over the exploits of the beautiful Miss Mai Tieh-Sua and her corps of 500 Amazons, now fighting on the northern front.

Miss Mai, aged 20, is the daughter of a wealthy merchant of Kwangsi, always a warlike Province.

Graduate of the Kwangsi Provincial Middle School, she joined the army as a private directly the war began.

During the epic Chinese defence of Hsuchow last May Miss Mai fought so gallantly that she was promoted, first captain, then battalion commander, being the first woman to hold that rank in the Chinese Army.

She has collected a corps of 500 Amazons and fought in all the battles along the Lung-Hai railway.—Reuter.

"MUCH OBLIGED TO ITALY."

JAP. PREMIER'S MESSAGE.

THE FUTURE OF CHINA.

MILAN, Friday.—"Il Popolo d'Italia," which is the personal property of the Mussolini family, publishes a message from Prince Kanoe, the Japanese Premier, to the Italian people. After exalting the German-Italo-Japanese pact against Communism, the Prince explains that he is convinced that there can be no peace in East Asia until Japan has overthrown Chiang Kai-Shek, who, he says, collaborates with the Soviets. Japan will not look back until she has attained this end (wires the 'Daily Telegraph and Morning Post" correspondent). After the overthrow of Chiang Kai-shek the Chinese will be allowed to choose between a federation of several smaller States, or one large State, but no Chinese Government which refuses to "collaborate" with Japan will be tolerated.

The Japanese people are extremely obliged to Italy for her deep understanding of their country's aims, for Italian support of the Nine-Power Conference, her refusal to send arms to China, and her withdrawal of Italian military advisers who were formerly engaged with the Chinese Government.

BLIND GOLFERS' TITLE.

18 HOLES TOURNEY IN U.S.A.

ENGLISHMAN AMONG STARTERS.

DULUTH (Minnesota), Saturday.—A blind Englishman, Wm. H. Oxenham, is competing for the "World Blind Golfers' Championship" over 18 holes on the Ridgeview Golf Course here to-day against Clinton Russell, of Duluth. Oxenham, who is a London osteopath, resides at Hove, Sussex, and is a member of the West Hove Golf Club.

In an interview Oxenham stated that he had never played golf before he went blind. He has been playing for five years.

"I play golf like anybody else," he said. "My caddy merely puts the club head against the ball, tells me the distance and direction, and I hit."

The match is attracting national attention in the United States, and proceeds are being given to the Duluth Light House for the blind.—Press Association Special.

FERRIER'S VICTORY.

ADELAIDE, Saturday. — Jim Ferrier, runner-up in the British Amateur Golf Championship in 1936, to-day won the Australian Open Championship for the first time with an aggregate of 283 for 72 holes. Ferrier had rounds of 71, 68, 72, and 72. Three times previously in five attempts Ferrier had finished second.—Press Association Special.

CANADIAN OPEN TITLE.

TORONTO, Saturday.—Paul Runyan and Sam Snead, American Ryder Cup golfers, lead the field in the Canadian Open Golf Championship with aggregates of 136 for 36 holes. Harry Cooper, the London-born American, had a second round of 66, a record for the course, and with two rounds to play was lying third with 137.

Other leading placings were:—Horton Smith, 141; Ed Oliver, 141; Gene Kunes, 142; Walter Hagen, 145; Victor Ghezzi, 145; Lawson Little, 146; and Sid Brews (South Africa) 148.—Press Association Special.

REG. WHITCOMBE WINS.

Expectations of an exciting finish were fulfilled at East Brighton Court on Friday, for with more than half the field having completed the final round in the "News Chronicle" £1,000 golf tournament four players—H. B. Rhodes (S. Herts), Cecil Denny (Thorpe Hall)), Arthur Lacey (Berkshire), and Don Curtis (Queen's Park)—were level at 302 for 72 holes.

The only player with a chance of catching them was the Open champion, Reginald Whitcombe, who wanted a 76 to win, and did the first nine holes in 38 on his last round. He completed the round with 37, thus finishing with two of a lead, won the first prize of £200.

A high wind and rain made scoring difficult, and there were many extraordinary returns. Alfred Padgham, former Open champion, beat all his high scoring records with a round of 88, and Ernest Whitcombe, who won last year with 268, completed the day's play with an aggregate of 317.

FARMER SHOT BY DOG.

An excited dog is believed to have caused the discharge of a sporting gun which caused the death of Mr. William Hatcher (42), of Little Buckland Farm, Maidstone, on Friday.

Mr. Hatcher was out shooting in a car with another farmer. Mr. Hatcher fired at a rabbit, and in the excitement, it is believed, the dog jumped against the gun, which went off, and Mr. Hatcher received the full charge in his left side.

He died later in the West Kent Hospital, Maidstone.

BELFAST STADIUM BOXING.

STEWART CAUTIOUS

IN BOUT WITH PATERSON.

JACK M'KENZIE 'CLEARS THE RING'

Despite the inclemency of the weather there was a crowded "house" for the re-opening of the Belfast Sports Stadium, Cuba Street, on Friday evening, Mr. John Sholdis staging excellent fare in four ten-rounders and a six-spot duel.

The main attraction was a ten rounds contest between Tommy Stewart (Belfast), Ulster fly-weight title contender, and Jackie Paterson (Glasgow), whose claim to local fame lies in the fact that he recently scored a knock-out victory over the much-fancied Rinty Monaghan, who is Stewart's rival for an 8st. eliminator.

Stewart scaled 8st. exactly, and Paterson was 7st. 13¾ lb. The early rounds were disappointing (writes "The Timekeeper"), both boys being over-cautious. Stewart seemed more intent on avoiding the Scot's anæsthetic punch than in getting to work with his customary bustling tactics, while the Glaswegian danced around his rival, peppering him with light leads when the opportunity was presented, which was rarely. As an exhibition of "still life" their posing was perfect!

The exchanges brightened considerably after the fourth round, but Stewart, while showing a useful spearing left, failed to employ his chances to get across a right swing effectively. His timing was badly "out," and his deliveries were too often merely "wrist" slams. Many of his punches sailed harmlessly round his opponent's back.

HOW SCOT IMPRESSED.

Paterson throughout was smart on his feet, quick to get in, and accurate in his lead. Stewart's left eye was cut in the ninth round.

While there was really little dividing the boys at the close, the margin, in my view, favoured Paterson as the more enterprising battler, and the crowd, keen at the start to see Stewart spring a surprise, certainly appeared disappointed because the referee called it a draw. Stewart was "beaten" by his rival's reputation.

A fine display of hard hitting was seen in a ten-rounder between Al Pedlar (Belfast) and Johnny Leech (Glasgow), a draw being the verdict.

Billy Stevens, another Scottish boxer, forced the retirement of Boyo Taylor (Belfast) in the fourth heat of a ten-rounder.

Jack M'Kenzie, a smart young Belfast flyweight, notched a third round knock-out victory against a game trier, Jim Lavery (Manchester.)

When M'Kenzie got into his stride, Lavery had a rough passage, being down twice in the second heat, in which he was saved by the bell.

Lavery was carried clean through the slack ropes in the third session, landing on top of Mr. W. Coulter (who held the watch), and was unable to regain the ring before being counted out.

Tim O'Brien knocked out Jack Knight, the closure being applied in the fourth session.

Pat Collins (Glasgow), who manages Jackie Paterson, called at the "Telegraph" office this forenoon to say that he would now like to match his boy against Jim M'Stravick. He thought it would produce a lively contest.

While Pat admitted he was naturally disappointed that Paterson did not receive the award against Stewart, he sportingly gave the referee "right of way," adding that Paterson was very pleased with the friendly reception he got from the crowd.

TED BROADRIBB AND WARNOCK.

FAMOUS TRAINER'S OFFER.

LONDON GYM PREPARATION.

I had an interesting chat this morning (writes "The Timekeeper") with Mr. Ted Broadribb one of Britain's most famous boxing managers, who, with Mrs. Broadribb, is experiencing a pleasant holiday in Ireland, and, having spent a fortnight in Dublin, is now enjoying the hospitality of his Belfast friend, Mr. Hugh M'Alevey.

Ted, who some time ago met with a serious motoring accident, in which his heavyweight protege, Don Lydon (Mayo) was also injured, is making satisfactory progress, although he confesses he cannot yet move about as quickly as he would like. He is making a trip to-day to Mullingar to see Chris Cole, whom he regards as a very promising heavyweight prospect.

In the course of conversation Ted turned the "current" on to Jimmy Warnock and his future, remarking that he would very much like to bring the Irish flyweight champion over to London for a few weeks' training at his gymnasium

SPORTING INTEREST.

"I am not angling to secure Jimmy for my management," pointed out Mr. Broadribb, "but I honestly think Warnock has been under an unfair cloud recently, and that he merely requires the proper preparation to set him back where he belongs—on the top of the world flyweight division.

"I would like to be the man who offered him a friendly hand, when so many others appear to have nothing to give but unfriendly criticism!"

Ted hopes to see Warnock next week, but in the meantime, I was able to tell him that both Mr. Jim Rice and Mr. Nat Joseph have match offers before Warnock for next month.

My advice to Jimmy, who has decided against anchoring himself in Liverpool, is to undergo the best preparation he can secure, and then get back to active ring work. He can still be in the first flight of world flyweights.

I met Jimmy at the Cuba Street Stadium last evening, when he told me of his future plans, mentioning the offers now before hem. He said he was determined to re-establish himself, and had confidence that he could do this without undue delay

BOON V. ARMSTRONG IN DUBLIN.

NEW YORK, Saturday.—Eddie Mead, manager of Henry Armstrong, the coloured fighter, who on Wednesday became the holder of three world championships at once, states that he has received an offer from Mr. Sydney Hulls, the English promoter, to defend his lightweight title at the end of September in Dublin, for a purse of £5,000 tax free, and tickets for the round trip for four, against Eric Boon, the young Chatteris boxer, who has rapidly come to the fore as one of the leading British lightweights.

Bill Daly, manager of Maurice Strickland, acting on behalf of Mr. Hulls, told the Press Association to-day that Armstrong was not so seriously hurt as was thought in his fight with Ambers, and that he might be fit to fight again by the end of September. Mead will decide within the next 48-hours regarding the offer.—Press Association Foreign Special.

SMALL MONTANA FOR ENGLAND.

NEW YORK Saturday.—Sid Wolfe, manager of Small Montana, who defeated Midget Wolgast to win the flyweight championship of the world in September 1935, announced to-day that he was in communication with Mr. Sydney Hulls, the British promoter, with the view of fixing up fights for Montana in England.

Both Montana and Wolfe are sailing for England within the next ten days.

In a preliminary bout on the Armstrong-Ambers title fight programme at Madison Square Gardens, Montana beat Tommy Forte (Philadelphia) over six gruelling rounds. On that occasion, Montana's manager said that he was anxious for Montana to fight Peter Kane or Jackie Jurich, who meet for the world title next month in England.—Press Association Foreign Special.

THE NORTH SHOULD BE PROUD.

BEST-TRAINED DOG

AS WINNER OF ECLIPSE STAKES.

Peter the Piper proved himself the best dog trained in the North at Celtic last night with a half length win from Rebel Mars in the Eclipse Stakes.

The event was well-named as far as Cluggin Cross and Roe Nibs (first and second favourite respectively) were concerned, for neither looked like collaring Rebel Mars, who went off with a lead of six lengths, which he kept intact until the winner began to overtake him with a grand turn of finishing pace.

Gradually wearing the "Rebel" down in the final stage of the race Johnny Magee's charge got up to score by half a length, with the favourite third and Roe Nibs beating Claremont Mutton for the whipper-in position.

NEWCOMER DEFEATED.

Irish Elk ran a good race to win from the newcomer, Very Elaborate, in the Crebilly Stakes in 32.53secs.

The field ran bunched to the top turn, where Hardboiled was beaten for the rails, the winner taking over from Very Elaborate and going on to score by two lengths.

A comparison of the time of Jimmy Magee's charge with that of Cavan Lad gives some idea of the merit of the latter, who led from half-way down the back straight to score with ease in 31.98 secs.

Led by Parish Wonder, Cavan Lad easily shot past the latter in the race to the top turn, and staying on much better than his earlier form had suggested won running away.

LIKED RAIN-SODDEN TRACK.

Queen of Hunt is another who seemed to appreciate the rain-sodden track, recording her first win for some time when heading Ballygubbin to score in 31.19secs. in the Sandown Stakes.

Ballygubbin had every chance after taking over the lead from Arina on the turn, but seemed to lose heart under the strong challenge of the bitch in the home straight.

Lone Sally won the opening event from Bob's Elf. The Kilkeel bitch was a bit lucky in running, and had the runner-up not got a bad knock on the bend he might well have reversed the placings.

Judging by her form in the Futurity Stakes Deereena must have relished the conditions. She certainly never ran as well in her life—unplaced in 21.63secs. last time—and clocked a snappy 30.83 secs. to beat Bann Moonshine eight lengths.

RACEHORSE OWNER DEAD.

MR. DAN COOPER, OF WARRINGTON.

Mr. Dan Cooper, the well-known racehorse owner died early to-day at his home at Warrington from a heart attack, aged 63. Mr. Cooper, who was a builder and contractor, was a regular visitor to all the principal racecourses, and was a fearless bettor. Among the many horses which have carried his colours successfully were Games, Cringle Crag, and Lorenzo. His horses, and those owned by his daughter, were trained by Captain J. C. Storie at Beverley and Cecil Ray at Epsom.

COUNTY CRICKET.

RACE FOR CHAMPIONSHIP.

YORKS HANDICAP TO-DAY.

Rain interfered with county cricket yesterday, but only one game was abandoned, that between Glamorgan and Lancashire at Swansea.

Essex's last five wickets went down in a rush at Lord's, and so Middlesex, winning by ten wickets, were able to keep hot on Yorkshire's heels in the county championship.

Yorkshire have still to play Nottingham at Trent Bridge (to-day and without five Test men), Kent at Dover, and Sussex at Hove; Middlesex meet Lancashire at Old Trafford (on Wednesday) and Surrey at Lord's.

Woolley once more routed Leicestershire; in the second innings he took six wickets for 57 runs, and in the match eleven for 106. Kent won by nine wickets.

Needing 251 to beat Worcestershire, Somerset lost five wickets for 79; Lee, who almost carried his bat for a century for the second time in the match, and Wellard, added 59 in forty-five minutes, but Worcestershire won by 45 runs.

Surrey's declaration at 121 for five at Edgbaston left Warwickshire 197 to make, and at the close they still needed 89 with seven wickets in hand.

Apparently that friendship course of time was not of an character, and there was no dou Flower persistently followed Warman. There could be no dou Flower had made a deliberate a to wreck the accused's home.

Warman had made a full stat the police, and it was on his adm that the prosecution based their ca

"I SHALL SHOOT HIM."

On Wednesday night, August tinued Mr. Lewis, according accused's statement, in conseque a complaint made to him by his said to her, "If he comes round a shall shoot him."

Regarding August 5, the night alleged shooting, Warman, in a ment, said: "To-night I went Liberal Club and at about 11 p my wife near the Royal Cinema. we had been in the house some m I told my wife to go to bed and the light out downstairs, which she I then looked through the letter-box saw Flower coming up the path. I my gun, put a cartridge in it, and out the back door.

"I walked round the garden and him lying in the grass in the ga opposite the front bedroom window did not speak, but put the gun to shoulder and simply shot him. He up and came for me, and we strugg I had thrown the gun to the ground"

Warman said, Mr. Lewis added, "I did not shoot to kill him. I shot at his legs. The result was that Flower was removed to the hospital where he was found to be suffering from a gunshot wound in the upper part of his thigh.

I was not a case of sudden impulse, continued Mr. Lewis, but a premeditated attempt to avenge the wrong that Flower had done to the accused and his family.

VISITS TO HOUSE.

Bernard Flower, in evidence, told the Bench that he had known Warman's wife since she was 14, and before she was married he was in the habit of taking her out for walks and to the pictures. He also stated that since she had been married he had by arrangements met Mrs. Warman and had gone to her house with her when the accused was not in. He admitted there had been intimacy.

Dorothy May Warman (23), wife of the accused, said she was married on May 7, 1934, and there were two children. She had known Flower many years and met him frequently at the club, and her husband often brought him home to play cards.

On August 3, when witness was going out to find her husband, she met Flower, and a struggle took place. She bit him on the face and got away from him. She later told her husband what had happened, and he said, "If I get hold of him I shall shoot him."

Warman was committed for trial at the next Lincoln Assizes and reserved his defence.

Longer Life for Cut Flowers

DIANA GIBSON

FRESH flowers are getting rather less plentiful, and those of us who live in the town and have not our own supply near at hand from our own gardens are finding the flower decorations in our homes a little more expensive than they have been.

It therefore behoves us to give our flowers due care, so that they will keep fresh as long as possible.

If you cut your own blooms, then it is better to cut them in the early morning when they are cool and full of moisture. Use a sharp knife and cut the stems slantwise. Scissors are not so good for the purpose.

Left In Water.

As soon as they are cut they should be put in a deep receptacle full of water and kept in a cool place until you are ready to arrange them.

Flowers which come by post or which you have bought at your florist should be loosened from their bindings, and each stem cut half an inch from the end, in a slanting direction (so that a large area of the stem is exposed to the water). Each flower should then be put into cold water right up to the head, and left in the cool for some hours. The flowers will then revive and the stems be straight and stiff.

Roses should have the thorns removed, and the lower part of the stem peeled for an inch or so, and split.

Before the flowers are arranged, all the leaves which are likely to be "drowned" in the water should be removed from the stems. If they are allowed to remain they will decay and the water will become discoloured and thick with the particles from the dead leaves. Not only does this create an unpleasant odour, but it makes it impossible for the stems to absorb the water.

Too many flowers in one vase should also be avoided. When possible use wide necked vases for they are more conductive to fresh flowers than a small necked vessel which may exclude the air.

Flowers do not like the heat and should, therefore, be placed in as cool a spot as possible. They should certainly be placed out of the sunlight, as it will dry the flowers faster than the stems can draw up the water.

Ice Is So Refreshing.

Roses especially are apt to wilt quickly in the heat, and you will find that a little ice added to the water will help considerably towards keeping them fresh. Carnations, too, seem to prefer iced water in hot weather.

The water should be changed as frequently as possible—every one or two days is advisable—and the stems should be given another slantwise cut every time they are re-arranged.

At night the vases should be put in a cool place, and water added to fill them to the brim.

Ostrich Feathers for Hats.

A good deal of publicity has been given lately to the use of ostrich feathers, and they have been worn with success by several leaders of fashion. In consequence, leading millinery houses are anticipating a demand for feather-trimmed hats in the future. These lovely feathers in soft colourings are both graceful and becoming.

Novelty Clips.

There are all sorts of amusing clips and dress ornaments for your neckline, your lapel, for your cuff or the top of your pocket—just as you please.

Some of these clips show elephants' heads, or several tiny elephants in a row. Others are in the shape of grinning, black faces, topped by gay turbans.

And there are many quaint insects and reptiles—lady-birds, frogs, spiders—and so forth to be found.

SUZETTE VISITS THE NORTHERN CAPITALS

SO many of my friends are "doing" the Northern Capitals — Copenhagen, Oslo, and all that—I thought I really must "do" Northern Capitals, too. So here I am at Londonderry after doing Portrush and Portstewart, our own three Northern Capitals. They really are marvellous. Visit them as you would some place you don't know very well.

Portrush is just full of cars and people. As for the women there, well if they aren't "slacked" they are "shorted," everywhere its slacks or shorts. I felt quite mediæval in a pleated skirt, although it was just about as abbreviated as it could be.

Candidly, I don't like slacks and shorts. Some women, lovely women, look beautiful in them, but then beauty becomes anything. Others, however, were not designed for slacks or shorts, but alas they are the ones who wear them.

The beach is always packed, family parties bathing, fond parents desirous of bringing up spartan children attire their little ones aged about four or five years in bathing suits, and then you hear the Seaside Mothers' Anthem .

"Get wet, dear; get right down, or you must come out; now go under. Do you hear me? Get wet, dear."

So it rises in crescendo. Why they don't leave the little ones to be brave by themselves when they see other children, I don't know. Wee shivering mites, some of them don't enjoy getting under; I don't myself until I have sampled the water with first one foot and then the other. However, there is lots of fun to be had at Portrush, and bronzed faces seem to say we are enjoying ourselves.

Whatever you do, don't attempt to walk along the Coast Road from Portrush to Portstewart. I did it once, but never again. So I hand on my experience. As each bus comes along you fall flat against the hedge, close your eyes and wait until it passes, then you open your eyes, rise slowly and see if you are still intact before you progress further.

As I sat on the roadside to sketch an old church, a coach and four came along, the driver in a three-cornered hat, within the coach a lovely lady in silver and blue, and beside her a gallant soldier in scarlet and gold. When I looked again it had gone, so perhaps it was only the sun in my eyes.

I HEARD an American visitor say it was worth while to come to Portstewart just to see the sunsets. It certainly is! They are lovely, red and gold and purple, and they lighten the rocks and the seas with lovely colour. A sunset beautiful is a wonderful thing, and the sunset of life, if it be beautiful, must be most wonderful of all. That is why we stop and looked at an aged face that is lined and wrinkled with the signs of laughter and tears.

Of our Northern capitals Londonderry is a place by itself! By that I mean it is unique, and what a lot of history you can learn from one afternoon in Derry. Just remember that the first Apprentice Boys of Derry were from the famous Blue Coat School in London. No wonder it is called Londonderry, for truly it is a city made by the London merchants.

The Cathedral, that really is well worthy of a visit. I bought a guide book; not that I have much use for guide books, but I thought I might learn something. I was right. This guide book to the Cathedral is compiled by the Dean of Derry, Dr. King, that eminent historian, who has probably forgotten more about the history of Derry than most of us know. I would love to send his guide book to those who are responsible for history text books in schools and say. "Could you make your dates like this; it's too late to benefit myself, but then we must think of posterity, everybody does."

Another thing the Dean deserves our praise and gratitude for is he has had the plaster removed from the inside of the Cathedral walls. I was looking at the walls when the verger told me this, and I thought what a magnificent piece of work and how few realise how beautiful old walls can be. Just sit in the Cathedral and see the flags of the regiments fairly swaying above your head, the sunshine coming through the stained-glass windows, those beautiful windows, and playing upon the walls, where you can now see each brick and stone as it was placed. A building built to endure! If those walls could speak what stories they could tell us.

Yes, in seeking far-away places don't despise these, our Northern capitals. They will reward you with their fun, their beauty and their story.

Brighter Kitchens

by Merle

EVEN though your kitchen is not built on the same modern lines as perhaps your newly-married daughter's, there is nothing to prevent it looking the same.

To-day the kitchen (which was once considered very humble) is one of the brightest and gayest rooms in the house. At least, this was my verdict when I was shown over a delightful bungalow a few weeks ago. The delicate shades of primrose and green were stimulating in themselves (which is surely an asset when a woman spends the largest part of her day in the kitchen). Attractive curtains of pale green muslin, sprigged with yellow, were reflected in the gleaming taps, and added to the very gay atmosphere.

I was particularly impressed with the utility kitchen table, and thought how useful it would be in a small flat where space was limited. It was medium-sized, and consisted of a meat safe, a cupboard bin for vegetables, and three large drawers.

All the cooking utensils, crockery, etc., were concealed in cupboards, which made the kitchen look much larger than if they had been on show. The gas cooker stood in its own little alcove, and, while there is no such alcove in old houses, a new coat of enamel harmonising with the rest of the colour scheme will make a world of difference to your stove, and you won't mind it being seen.

So, you who have old-fashioned kitchens, modernise them! It won't cost much, and you will find it worth while. Bright surroundings go a long way towards lightening the sometimes monotonous household tasks, and when you have realised this then your "housework battle" is won.

LONDON DIARY of an ULSTERWOMAN

TO-MORROW Princess Margaret celebrates her eighth birthday. Her parents who are in Scotland are giving a birthday party for her, and small friends in the district will be invited to it. Although the little Princess is not as well known to the public as her sister, Princess Elizabeth, she has of late come in for a fair amount of publicity, a publicity of which neither the King nor Queen wholly approves, though recognising that it is inevitable. In spite of their rank, however, the little girls have been brought up in a very sensible, normal way. Princess Margaret is a very bright child, extremely musical, and like Princess Elizabeth is fond of all the things which small children like. One of the presents from the King to her will be a pearl. It has been the King's custom to give her one or two pearls to mark each birthday, and when she comes of age Princess Margaret will have sufficient to make a very beautiful string.

I HEAR that Princess Juliana and her husband Prince Bernhardt are shortly to pay a visit to Scotland. At present they are holidaying in Germany. Princess Juliana knows Scotland fairly well, and about three years ago she went there with her mother, Queen Wilhelmina, who used to enjoy painting the Highland scenery. On that occasion they paid a visit to the late King George and Queen Mary. If the King and Queen are still in residence at Balmoral when Princess Juliana and her husband come over they, too, will probably entertain them. Their hostess in Scotland will be a very beautiful Mexican woman, Mrs. William Arbuthnot-Leslie of Lickleyhead Castle, Aberdeenshire. She was formerly Senorita Maria de la Lux de Landa y Escandon, and her father was Governor of Mexico City under General Porfirio Diaz. Her sons by her first marriage are close friends of Prince Bernhardt. I last saw Princess Juliana and Prince Bernhardt at a Speaker's reception given on the eve of the Coronation, and like everybody else I thought how happy they looked, and how friendly.

THE Duke and Duchess of Gloucester had a very friendly reception when they landed at Port Said en route for Kenya. Huge crowds assembled to meet them, and the Duchess received lots of bouquets. One particularly beautiful one was from King Farouk. Everybody is hoping that the change and the rest will have a beneficial effect on the Duchess who is one of the most popular of women.

London at the moment is crowded with visitors from practically every part of the globe. Most of them, naturally, are anxious to see the various "sights," and high up in the list of "sights" is the impressive "Changing of the Guard" ceremony. When the Court is out of London, as it is at present, this takes place at St. James's Palace, and visitors are extremely disappointed that owing to the small sight-seeing area they rarely see anything at all of the ceremony. The suggestion has been made that the ceremony should always take place at Buckingham Palace, and if this could be arranged it would certainly give pleasure to a great many. Tradition of course stands in the way, but that is the only reason why it could not be changed. Perhaps it may be found possible to break with this tradition, at any rate during the summer months when the influx is at its height. London has much to offer sight-seers, it is true, but it is a pity if they do not go away to their home having seen all the principal ceremonies.

WOMEN are playing a prominent part at the British Association meeting in Cambridge. The number of women scientists reading papers at it is thirty, and when one realises that to read a paper before such a learned body is one of the high water marks of the scientists, then it will be seen what a triumph this is for women. The subject in which most of the women are interested is botany, though some are interesting themselves in psychology and education. An outstanding woman in the psychology section is Professor Winifred Cullis, who is well known throughout Ireland generally, and more especially to women graduates. She is a former president of the Federation of University Women, and a few years ago spoke at the conference of the Irish Federation. Her broadcast talks have made her familiar in almost every home.

A grim reminder of the times in which we are living was given by an architect speaking at the conference. He spoke of the desirability of equipping all schools with air raid shelters. For those of us who have passed schooldays it is somewhat horrifying to think that the boys and girls of to-day are passing their most impressionable days in an atmosphere of war talk and war precautions. One can only wonder what will be the effect of it on them as they grow older.

Many happy returns to Princess Margaret Rose, who will be eight years old to-morrow.

BROKE BANNOCK ON BRIDE'S HEAD.

TRADITIONAL WELCOME.

WHEN CARRIED OVER THRESHOLD.

Lord Lyell and his bride were given a rousing welcome home to Kinnordy, near Kirriemuir, yesterday. The entrance gates were decorated with bunting and flowers, and half-way up the mile-long drive there was a bower of evergreens surmounted with a huge banner bearing the words—"Welcome Home."

At this point the car carrying Lord and Lady Lyell was halted by a dozen stalwart members of the staff, which attached tow ropes to the car and pulled the young laird and his lady up the drive to the house.

At the house a large number of the tenantry and estate workers had gathered and as Lord Lyell lifted his wife in his arms to carry her across the threshold in traditional style Mr. W. Wylie, one of the oldest tenants, broke a bannock over her head.

Mr. Wylie then, on behalf of the tenants and employes, welcomed them home. The company afterwards gathered in the hall and toasted the health of the young couple.

A Great Man Who Was Never Understood

Lady Oxford and Asquith's Saturday Commentary

GLADSTONE.

"No one I ever knew was less conscious of himself than he was."

I was interested the other day to read a letter from Lord Mildmay in reference to Sir Henry Lunn's letter on Mr. Gladstone in the General Election of 1880.

Lord Mildmay says: "I had the fullest opportunity of studying his (Mr. Gladstone's) mentality," etc., and further on goes on to say that Mr. Gladstone's eloquence was admittedly handicapped "by a devastating absence of any sense of humour so far as his own personality was concerned." He also suggests that the word "ponderous" should have been "applied to his pronouncements."

I do not know how often Lord Mildmay was either the guest, or the host, of Mr. Gladstone, but being both—through my sister's marriage to his nephew—Alfred Lyttelton—I differ from the criticisms of my old friend and hunting companion, Frank Mildmay.

However many opportunities anyone had of studying Mr. Gladstone's "mentality," I do not think it was ever properly understood. He never had what is invariably said of him—a remarkable sense of conscious rectitude.

No one that I ever knew, of Gladstone's fame, grandeur of character, and acknowledged oratory, was ever less conscious of himself than he was, and I often wondered, when he stayed at Glen and I stayed at Hawarden, why a man of such dominating personality and outstanding popularity should have remained so entirely without self-consciousness, and so extraordinarily simple.

SAID I WAS INTOLERANT

HIS simplicity almost amounted to naivete, and, when he praised men and women whom I thought inferior, his rebukes made me re-examine my prejudices. He often said to me: "My dear Margot, you are intolerant, and when you grow older you will learn, as I have, to suspend judgment."

This may have been "ponderous," but it was advice which I would have been wiser to have taken. We all have our own conceptions about what is called "a sense of humour," and every individual, as well as nation, has a different one.

The same sense of humour is rare; it unites us just as much as different ones divide us; and it is perhaps a sad reflection that what is not of primary importance in character should loom so large.

But a sense of humour is more significant than it sounds. It is essential in diplomacy and in politics. It overcomes conventions between Ambassadors, and often distracts debates, whether in Geneva or the House of Commons, when they become over-heated.

A SENSE OF HUMOUR

HUMOUR is different from wit, which is often barbed and hurts more than it amuses. A sense of humour is always human and often healing.

What is difficult for us to understand is the difference between our humour and that of other countries. Do the French understand the humour of the Germans, the British of the French, the Americans of the Scots? I doubt it.

It is never safe to generalise on anybody's sense of humour, and when Lord Mildmay writes that Gladstone had none, he is echoing a common opinion with which I have always disagreed.

Mr. Gladstone was over-engrossed, and gave a pre-occupied attention to what was said to him on minor matters. He was not always in the humour to be amused. Loud laughter, circulating smiles, and every form of mocking, chilled him to the marrow, and although you may say these do not denote a sense of humour, they are often the outcome of it.

Some of the best subjects I have ever heard discussed have been silenced by men who over-valued their sense of humour. I know nothing more devastating—I might almost say "ponderous"—than a misplaced sense of humour.

LUNCH ON THE HEATHER

THE Twelfth of August will always be a great day, and I remember when we were children at Glen, praying for fine weather so that we could join the guns at the far shepherd's cottage and lunch out-of-doors on the heather.

It was an occasion when I rode my best hunter on the coarse grass roads leading to the moors, and the beaters stood in a row, holding their sticks together for my lovely mare to jump, while lunch was laid by the burn out of the wind. This was a form of swagger which gave me, the gamekeeper, the shepherds, and the sportsmen equal satisfaction.

But to-day Glen, with its lovely moors, burns, and bracken, has gone out of my life, most of the big estates in Scotland are let, and the grouse I eat are bought.

DANCERS FROM 13 TO 80

THE only social event of importance which has taken place since I arrived to stay at North Berwick in my step-mother's cottage—Glenconner—has been the Gosford ball. The young Earl of Wemyss and his mother, Lady Lettice Benson, daughter of the late Duchess of Rutland, are determined to restore something of the former glory of Gosford—one of the finest houses on this beautiful coast.

Guests from long distances brought parties, and dancing went on till far into the following morning. There were little girls in muslin and old men in kilts, and their ages varied between thirteen and eighty. I was delighted to meet so many men and women whom I had known in my youth.

In the intervals of dancing, I talked to one old neighbour of ours at Glen. He reminded me of several Scots stories which I had forgotten. He said that, before I was born, there was a Peeblesshire laird who had an only son, heir to a vast estate.

He was a backward boy, and as there was an excellent board school on the property, his mother sent him there to prepare him before going to a public school in England. To her sorrow, young Adam was always at the bottom of the class. One day he came to his mother and told her in a tone of triumph that he had been second in the class. She asked him what the class consisted of, to which he replied: "Me, and a lassie."

We discussed the severity with which Sundays had been kept. Even in my youth no games were ever played, and I remember my father enjoining us to secrecy when he turned up a corner of the billiard cloth one night after dinner to practise the spot stroke on Sunday.

REBUKE FOR THE MINISTER

MINISTERS kept severe eyes on their parishioners to see that they did not enjoy themselves. One day after church the Scottish minister observed two small children playing a game on the grass. He stopped to admonish them, and said: "Where do little children go to who play on the Sabbath?" The little boy looked up at him and said "They gang to the green." "No," he replied, "they go to hell!"

At which the little girl got up and, taking her brother by the arm, said: "Come on, Jamie, we mauna listen to a man who is swearing most awfu'!"

EXAMINATION HOWLER

AT an examination in the village school, the clergyman, who gave lessons on Sunday, paused before a small girl, and said: "Who made your vile body?" To which the child replied: "I, sir, made the body, but Barbara Brown made the skirt."

In connection with Sunday I always remember the mother of Lord Haldane telling me at Cloan that she regretted the laxity with which Sundays were kept at the present day.

She said "If you look at stained glass windows from the cemeteries, their outsides are colourless and dull, but go inside and you will see the difference. This is what I feel about Sundays. They should be kept by the soul."

This fine saying has always remained with me.

FRAUD AND DURESS CLAIM.

MADE BY HER SON.

RACINE (Wisconsin), Saturday.—The will of Mrs. Maybell Horlick Sidley, heiress to the Horlick's malted milk fortune, is to be contested by her son, Mr. William Horlick Sidley.

He filed a suit last night, contending that his mother had not sufficient mental capacity to make a valid document, that she was of unsound mind at the time she signed the will and that her signature was procured by duress, fraud and undue influence.

Mrs. Sidley died on July 6 at the home of a friend in Toronto. At the suggestion of the Ontario Attorney-General an inquiry was held.

The bulk of her estate was left to her two sons.—Reuter.

NATIONAL STORES.

THE experiences of Britain during the Great War afforded an unforgettable lesson to the nation as to the importance of accumulating substantial stocks of food and raw materials to meet the possible exigencies of war. The severe lesson of actual experience showed us that supplies from overseas may be cut off fairly effectually by enemy action; and now that the peril of attacks from air has been added to that of sinkings by underwater craft, the possibilities must be recognised as graver than ever. A short while ago the British Government made extensive purchases of certain commodities which, it was thought, would be urgently required in the event of a war, but might not be easily obtainable in case of an enemy attempt to blockade our coasts. Mr. J. M. Keynes, the well-known economist, has framed a plan for dealing with this matter on new lines. It was described in a paper read on his behalf before the Economics Section of the British Association at Cambridge on Friday. Mr. Keynes would make use for his purpose of the machinery of the Essential Commodities Reserves Act. He has proposed that the British Government should offer storage to all Empire producers of certain specified classes of raw materials either free of warehouse charges and interest or for a nominal amount on condition of shipping their surplus produce to approved warehouses in Britain.

He did not propose that the Government should purchase the stock outright, but considered that it might offer to advance up to 90 per cent. of the market price at the date of delivery into storage, leaving a margin of ten per cent. of the current market price to be subsequently maintained by the owners. If necessity arose, the Government could purchase the stores and itself become absolute owner. There is much to be said on behalf of this project, but it has drawbacks which cannot be overlooked. The places where these commodities would be stored should be very carefully chosen and the location should be sufficiently far from the eastern and southern coasts of England not to be an easy mark for air raiders. Possibly the construction of huge underground cellars for the storage of the goods concerned would be the best means of forestalling such attacks. It must also be remembered that in case of war secret service agents of the enemy would be despatched to discover, if possible, where ammunition dumps and stores of important raw materials were situated with the object of effecting their destruction. Thus the utmost vigilance would be necessary in guarding all the depots. Nevertheless, it must be admitted that the creation of these reserves would play a useful part in avoiding rapid fluctuations of demand for raw materials and securing a steady output of essential goods. Mr. Keynes realised that complications might arise from the working out of the project so far as the exchanges are concerned, and therefore careful handling would be necessary. The possibilities of the proposed scheme, nevertheless, are such that it deserves careful investigation.

GOSSIP FROM PRESS.

BALMORAL GUEST LIST.

SOME REGULARS ABSENT.

LONDON, Saturday.

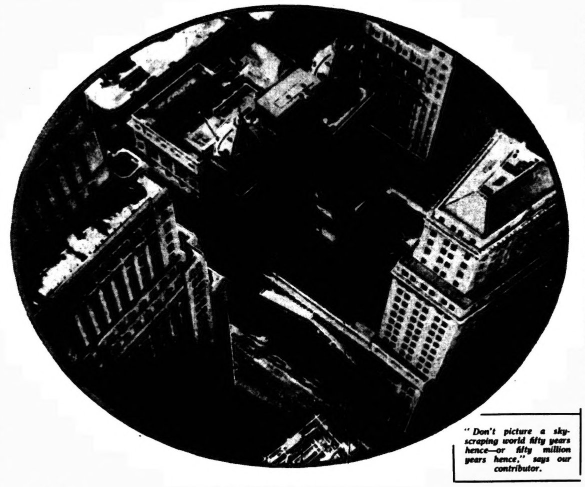
While the King and Queen are at Balmoral the names of their guests are not included in the Court Circular, the reason being that they are private guests. The King has invited a party of guns for Tuesday and the following days, and probably will shoot over the Micra moors. But that, so the experts tell me, depends on the weather. There has been rather a lot of mist recently. Of the non-shooting guests there will be one or two absentees from the regular list—for instance, an old friend of the Royal Family, Mrs. Ronald Greville. She is still not well enough after a long illness to stand the journey. Another absentee is Sister Agnes, or Miss Keyser. She is now over 80. Since she nursed King Edward VII. during his critical illness, when he was Prince of Wales, she has been a close friend of Royalty. As matron of the King Edward VII.'s Hospital for Officers since it was established in the Boer War, she has always been allowed a key to the private gardens of Buckingham Palace, where she can enjoy a walk in peace and solitude.—Noel Thompson in the "Daily Sketch."

NEXT PRESIDENT OF B.A.

Sir Albert Seward, who is to be next year's president of the British Association meeting, is unlikely in that capacity to be faced with any situation as difficult as that which confronted him during his Vice-Chancellorship of Cambridge University. This was in 1926, the year of the General Strike. It fell to Dr. Seward, as he then was, to superintend the arrangements by which hundreds of undergraduates were rushed to London and all over the country to act as emergency volunteers. The Vice-Chancellor lost no time in giving permission for them to go. A day or two later he issued a statement declaring that time spent away from Cambridge on work of national emergency would count as though it was spent in residence. Simultaneously Dr. Seward postponed all university examinations, so that a clear three weeks' interval was left for study after the strike. The emergency also involved holding up a ceremony at which honorary degrees were to be awarded Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, Sir Josiah Stamp, and others.—"Peterborough" in the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post."

CHEQUERS.

Mr. Chamberlain has gone to Chequers. Chequers Court, near Princes Risborough, Buckinghamshire, became an official residence of British Prime Ministers in 1921 through the generosity of its owners, Lord and Lady Lee of Fareham. Estate is about 1,500 acres in extent. Caractacus had stronghold here, of which earthworks are still visible. "Radulphus," Clerk to the Exchequer, was owner under Henry II., and place appears to have taken its name from his office. In 1565 his descendant, William Hawtrey, re-modelled the house and gave it much of its present character and appearance.—"News Chronicle."



"Don't picture a sky-scraping world fifty years hence—or fifty million years hence," says our contributor.

The CITY of the FUTURE

Hon. Humphrey Pakington, well-known novelist and lecturer, discusses the buildings of fifty years hence in our series on life half-a-century ahead

FIFTY YEARS HENCE, a time when the younger generation of to-day will be shaking their heads at their grandchildren, and the grandchildren will be laughing in reply and resolving that they will never grow old, will never sink into a rut, will always keep abreast of the times, will always understand and sympathise with the young idea.

So much we can surely prophesy, but what else can we say with any certainty? What will the world look like? What shall we have made of our surroundings?

I think that another thing can be said with certainty. In these 50 years determined efforts will have been made to establish a planned world. Fifty years used to be as naught in the history of world development, but the pace has quickened greatly of late and there is no telling where the next 50 years will land us.

★

WILL those years take control of us, in spite of our desires, or shall we at last take control of the years and fashion a world after our own liking? That we shall do so eventually few of us dare to doubt, for the alternative of chaos is too terrible to contemplate. But whether in 50 years' time we shall have converted this go-as-you-please world into the planned background of an ordered world community is quite another matter.

Most forecasts of the future accept a planned world as inevitable, though they vary very much in their estimates of the time of transition, while many suggest that the age of organisation will not be evolved till our present civilisation has crashed and we have returned to something of the simplicity of our forefathers But I shall assume that the miracle has been performed.

If we are to plan we must know what we want. Do we propose to plan this world as a pleasant place in which to live, or merely as a mechanical bee-hive? I think the former, in which case the first essential is to tackle the question of population.

Over-population, or at any rate, bad distribution of population, is at the root of most of our troubles. Until this problem is solved there will be no settled peace, no ordered world. Most of the prophets accept a bee-hive life, packed into skyscrapers, as men's inevitable destiny. Listen to the words of Olaf Stapledon in that brilliant book, "Last and First Men," even though it may be hardly fair to take the words out of their context.

Speaking of a time some 2,000 years hence, the author writes: "Great advances in artificial materials had enabled the erection of buildings in the form of slender pylons which, rising often to a height of three miles, or even more, and founded a quarter of a mile beneath the ground, might yet occupy a ground plan of less than half a mile across.

"These gigantic pillars of architecture, prophetic of the still mightier structures of an age to come, were scattered over every continent in varying density. Very rarely were they permitted to approach one another by a distance less than their height; on the other hand, save in the Arctic, they were very seldom separated by more than 20 miles. The general appearance of every country was thus rather like an open forest of lopped tree trunks, gigantic in stature.

★

"CLOUDS often encircled the middle heights of these artificial peaks, or blotted out all but the lower stories. Dwellers in the summits were familiar with the spectacle of a dazzling ocean of cloud, dotted on all sides with steep islands of architecture. Such was the altitude of the upper floors that it was sometimes necessary to maintain in them, not merely artificial heating, but artificial air pressure and oxygen supply.

"Between these columns of habitation and industry the land was everywhere green or brown with the seasonal variations of agriculture, park, and wild reserve. Broad grey thoroughfares for heavy freight traffic netted every continent, but lighter transport and the passenger services were wholly aerial. Over all the more populous districts the air was ever aswarm with 'planes up to a height of five miles, where the giant air liners plied between the continents."

Most of these prophecies foretell an age of giant skyscrapers, not placed cheek by jowl, certainly, as were the early skyscrapers of New York, but skyscrapers nevertheless, forced upon us by the over-population of the globe. I can see no use in a skyscraper except as a remedy for overcrowding.

I do not believe that anyone wants to live a thousand feet, or yards, or miles up in the air. Of course, we may become so air-minded that we are only at home in the dizzy heights, but I for one do not believe it. The surface of the earth, with all the glorious variations of nature and all the splendid opportunities for its modelling by the hand of man, is far too attractive a thing to be treated as a mere footstool, and to the earth we shall stick.

So don't picture a skyscraping world fifty years hence, or fifty million for that matter.

The small town and village, rather than the teeming city, will be the communal unit in an age of order.

There will be wide, double-tracked roads here and there, bordered by avenues, running from town to town as straight as the lie of the land allowed. But perhaps the view from the hills will be more different by night, for instead of twinkling house-lights here and there, and the occasional beams of a car's headlights, the view will be like a map drawn in white upon a black background. Here and there will be white, flood-lit patches which were the towns and villages, and these will be connected by white, floodlit strips which were the roads.

★

MOTORING by night will be much the same as motoring by day. The surface of the roads will be floodlit and cars will need no dazzling lights. Night flying will also be a simple matter—as easy as the reading of a map—and the principal towns will flash given signals into the sky, as do the lighthouses of to-day, in order to guide the aeroplanes.

But what of the individual buildings and their style of architecture? This is indeed a difficult matter for prophecy.

Cast your mind back 50 years. Would you then have prophesied anything approaching the architecture of to-day? Fifty years ago people were coming to the conclusion that Ruskin's Venetian Gothic was not really quite suitable as a national style, and were toying with the so-called "Queen Anne," which was to culminate in the red-brick contortions of Chelsea and Kensington.

Poor Queen Anne! She was indeed proved to be dead. There was certainly nothing in that age to foretell the modern rage for functionalism; flat roofs (are these functional, by the way?), straight lines, white walls; nothing, except the perverseness of the generations, with their passionate revolt against the work of their fathers and grandfathers.

Yet many people of to-day, forgetting all the warnings of the past, seem to think that we have discovered an eternal style, seem to see the future of architecture as an unending stream of stark, stripped, functional design.

This is surely to disregard the lessons of the changing generations, and yet I believe that so-called "Modernism" has come to stay, for a time at any rate, for it is an attempt to return to fundamentals, a style in the rough, ready to be modelled into shape by the coming generations. Here, indeed, it differs from the Victorian styles—finished mimicries on which none could build.

Let us regard modernism, then, as a style in the rough, but do not let us think, as so many of the prophets would have us think, that the world is not permanently stream-lined. How they will laugh at our stream-lining, those grandchildren of ours!

THE SOUL OF BEAUTY

★

Thoughts for the Times by Dr. A. D. Belden

IS there one of us who is untouched by beauty at this time of the year, who fails to register every now and again that strange ecstacy which lies beyond joy or pain?

The golden corn falling before the reaper; the yacht riding the moonlit sea; the sunrise over the forest; the sunset over the lake; these things and so many others make one catch one's breath and stand and gaze. How impossible it is to feel that it is all devoid of meaning.

Your chemist can reduce it all to atoms and vibrations at different rates of motion. Yet without the operation of your mind there would be no perspective or relationship of harmony or contrast in the picture Nature presents. Apart from your appreciation or that of some kindred mind celestial or terrestial, it would remain mere chemistry with less significance even than a dream.

As MacNeile Dixon has pointed out in his recent brilliant lecture, "The Human Situation," "if there were no spectators of the moving scene of Nature there would be no 'Here's' and 'Nows'; 'Here' is 'here for someone,' 'Now' is 'now for someone'."

• • •

IT is indeed difficult to give any kind of real existence to the universe which has no spectator, no appreciating intelligence, a blind, deaf, dumb insensate world, created for nothing, by nothing, and impressing nothing. No! As Browning cried long since:—

"This world's no blot nor blank for us,
It means intensely, and means good."

When we try to analyse our experience of the beautiful we find it is definitely one of rapture, and the very nature of rapture is its touch of extravagance; there is a surplus value over and above any element of necessity. One of the clearest instances of this is the way Nature passes beyond the serviceable greenness of its vegetation and adds the infinite glory of flowers. Here is a sheer gift, an unnecessary extravagance, a rapturous generosity from Nature to Man.

It is the same with a fine picture, a melodious symphony, an exquisite poem or sculpture; when the senses have been filled with all that they can take, there is an extra something which gives the mind a pleasant shock of surprise, that is beauty's very soul, the element of gift in it all.

If this universal fact is not one of the plainest indications of generosity at the heart of all, then human reasoning is bankrupt. Why should Nature go out of its way to pile glory upon glory, in the heavens, on the mountains, in the valleys, and the seas, in the very food we eat, in the very bodies we wear, if not at the impulse of the kindliest feeling towards man.

It is as though in the flowers, and the singing of birds, in the rippling stream, or the silver moonbeam, God were saying to His human children "See! I love you! I love you!"

• • •

MOREOVER, a like nobleness rises in man to greet this generosity of God in Nature. The passion for beauty is active in every soul. In many it is starved by the man-made ugliness and disorder with which they are surrounded, but nevertheless the colour-hunger of the slum child is a recurring proof of its imperishability.

There is no deadlier foe of the slum than such organisations as Children's Country Holiday Fund; for those long-cheated young eyes once begin to feast upon Nature's soft contours, her colour triumphs and royal spaciousness, and a discontent truly Divine will possess them. Some of them will become seekers and servants of the beautiful for the rest of their lives, and a generation may at last arrive which will no longer tolerate anything but the fair and beautiful [illegible] home, factory and city.

This response of humanity is vital to the purposefulness of beauty; without it, its obvious meaning is unfulfilled. Shall the Divine Artist toil thus and His message of beauty find none to receive it? The shepherd-boy, lying on his back by the sheep pen in the summer night, gazes up at the countless host of Heaven, and his little self seems hopelessly lost in the immensity of things, and amid the multitude of the stars. Yet how different is the actual fact.

The tens of thousands of vibrating beams of light converge at the command of this shepherd boy upon the pupil of his eye; they cross each other without loss or confusion in a point that has no magnitude, and spread out again space for space in accurate facsimile upon the retina of the eye, and there before the brain the whole expanse of heaven is pictured. The immensely great is absorbed into the minutely small.

• • •

BUT the wonder does not stay there; somehow what up till then has been purely mechanical effects resolve themselves into emotion and thought, and the shepherd boy worships God in the wonder and glory of the night!

Thus beauty, when we find it, and it finds us, does something infinitely precious for us; it conveys a profound reassurance to the soul that Life is trustworthy and aglow with goodwill. So clear a gift does it bring to us that it arouses a deep sense of gratitude. It is for this reason that beauty has a healing value; its contemplation leads to adoration, and adoration leads to its absorption into one's own spirit, till one also becomes more beautiful. In its presence we may well join the Psalmist in his prayer "Let the beauty of the Lord our God be upon us."

Uncommon Sense

JOHN BLAKE ON SOUND ARGUMENTS

"WHEN you can't think of a sound argument," a famous English barrister advised his assistant, "launch a personal attack on your opponent. That generally changes the situation. The opponent may forget the argument itself and start defending himself. If you are interested merely in carrying off the prestige, that is often an effective procedure. Of course, it has nothing to do with actually settling the question."

I have known several people who apply that doctrine. If you dare to disagree with one of their statements you find yourself suddenly involved in a conflict of personalities. The real issue is lost in the smoke-screen of bickering.

• • •

One type of fellow who uses the trick may vary the procedure by pretending that to disagree with his statement means that you have attacked him. "So I'm a liar, am I?" he may say. And you find yourself making personal explanations instead of continuing the discussion.

Real discussion is possible only when both sides agree to observe certain rules. It is a give-and-take affair that requires honesty and fair play. Both participants have to agree tacitly to follow truth wherever it leads. Personalities must be left out.

• • •

The stimulating interplay of minds is impossible to the one who insists on turning everything into a personal issue. Like schoolboys who always resort to physical force to settle their arguments, the man who has himself too much on his mind can see disagreement only as a personal affront. To question one of his sweeping generalities is to insult him, to say anything to him except "yes" is to characterise yourself in his eyes as an enemy.

There have been kings and emperors who cut off the heads of men who told them the truth when that truth was distasteful to them. And there are men and women to-day like them; they cut off all intercourse with those who disagree with them.

• • •

Truth, when it is not in line with your particular pet ideas, is hard to accept. But unless you are willing to make an attempt at understanding it you have no chance to grow.

Development is possible only to the man who can comprehend things outside himself. His philosophy can be inclusive only if it embraces many things which go beyond his own immediate interests. His point of view can be intelligently broad only if it goes beyond the narrow limitations of self.

• • •

Winning an argument is never as important as learning something. It is often more valuable to the mind to be proved wrong than it is to be substantiated. If you are always right you must be inhuman.

"35 A" Isn't the First Number to have Made News

THE nation-wide interest which has been attracted by the unusual circumstances of a recent London Police Court case adds the combination "35a" to the ranks of numbers that have a personality of their own, and will go down to history.

Generally the public prefers names to numbers, and attaches them to its favourite locomotives and air liners instead of the official number. But from time to time a number makes news, and the very rarity of this event adds to the significance and mystery of the number.

Crime novelists have long appreciated the advantages of having a "mysterious" character known to his associates only as "71" or "33" instead of plain John Brown.

★

THE number 99 has been endowed with special fame and significance by the medical profession, who find that its pronunciation by a patient produces movements helpful to an examination of the chest. It is impossible to say the number without taking a breath.

Add another number 9, and you have a number printed in red on the dial of every automatic telephone in the London area. The number summons fire brigade, police or ambulance as required, and has priority. It is now as famous as the letters S.O.S.

Whitehall 1212, the telephone number of Scotland Yard, is equally well-known, and Whitehall also recalls the famous Room 57 in the Foreign Office, where telegrams destined for all corners of the earth are translated into code, and incoming telegrams are deciphered.

Often, even when they have to be de-coded, they still have to be translated from some foreign language, and those who work in Room 57 have to be expert linguists as well as masters in the art of using a code-book.

The Cipher Office, the official name of Room 57, sounds much less romantic. It is manned by army officers who have shown special ability for the difficult work. During the War, Room 57 was the "nerve centre" of the British Empire, and the brilliance of the cipher experts, who remained as anonymous as the room in which they worked, enabled the Allies to be fully informed of the contents of every enemy message transmitted by wireless within a very short time.

From 57 we move three numbers forward, to recall one of the great battles of the Great War by the name of Hill 60. Tens of thousands died in the fiercely-contested struggle for that valuable strategic point, which was at last wrested from the Germans on April 19, 1915.

★

NEARLY as heavy was the toll of life involved in the fight which ended in an Allied victory at Hill 70 on August 15, 1917. The War gave us other numbers that will go down in history, notably Q5, the "mystery ship," and 11.11.11, the hour, day and month of the Armistice.

The second highest mountain in the world, like Mount Everest, one of the Himalayan range, is known by the number K2. Its summit rises to a height of 28,280 feet, and has never been conquered by man.

K2 also bears the unofficial name of Mount Godwin-Austen—another example of the Englishman's natural dislike of numbers! Henry Godwin-Austen, after whom the peak was thus named, was a splendid mountaineer, and the first man to produce an accurate map of the lower ranges of the Himalayas.

R101 is a number whose story is too tragic to need recalling. The disastrous end of its maiden flight marked one of the greatest calamities in flying history. But many people must have wondered whether there was any method behind the seemingly haphazard numbering of Britain's rigid airships, the only ones being the R8, R33, R34, R38, R80, and R101.

The explanation is really quite simple. Airships are divided into two classes, limp (that is, without any metal framework) and rigid. But the two classes are numbered consecutively, the rigid airships being distinguished by the letter "R." There have, of course been many more "Blimps" produced and recorded as airships, and these are the "missing numbers" in the series. Blimps in the nature of things never become world-famous like their bigger sisters.

The world's most famous liner, the Queen Mary, was for years known as the "534," and her name was kept a secret right up to the moment when, as she broke the champagne bottle over the ship's bows, Her Majesty declared, "I name this ship 'The Queen Mary.'"

Nearly seven years had passed then since work had started on this wonderful ocean greyhound. For years she lay half-finished in the dockyard, work on her being held up by the depression. It was only the amalgamation of two great steamship companies, and aid from the British Government, that made it possible for work on the 534 to be resumed and the number to be translated into a name.

★

FIVE is a number long associated with mystical properties. The most famous number in the business world is the "big five"—the city man's name for Britain's five great banks. And every lover of detective novels knows that the "big five" are the brilliant detectives who investigate the most important crime cases at Scotland Yard.

Five has also won renown as a street number, for Fifth Avenue, New York, is one of the most famous thoroughfares in the world. All the thoroughfares in this great city, except Broadway, bear numbers instead of names, those running from north to south being called streets, and those which cross the island at right angles to the streets being avenues. The numbers have become so familiar that to-day they are almost names.

London Day By Day

Radiolympia Enterprise. Television and Fashions.

"Holding" Star Cricketers. Australian Control Methods.

LONDON, Saturday.

Don Bradman

THERE is a suggestion that Don Bradman may eventually settle in England. About the probabilities I say nothing. The Australian Board of Control make it difficult for anything of the kind to happen.

From every member of the teams that they send over to England they extract an undertaking that he shall not enter into a contract which will require (1) that he should stay in England at the end of the tour; or (2) that he should return to the Mother Country within a specified period of time.

These conditions are fixed in advance. It is, of course, possible to get round them; but whether Don Bradman would wish to do so is doubtful. His country, or at least his countrymen, have made considerable sacrifices to enable him to remain in Test cricket.

Designers' Opportunity.

FAMOUS designers of fashion will introduce and describe their own creations for the coming autumn and winter by television when Radiolympia opens next week. The show, which has been arranged in conjunction with the Fashion Group of Great Britain, will do much to help put British fashions on top of the world.

Each designer has been allotted one day, and some of them intend to explain their own secrets on how their creations were inspired. One of the days will be taken up by the International Wool Secretariat, and their representative will explain why wool is so important, and comment upon a collection of all-British wool dresses designed collectively by all the designers taking part.

The showing of fashions "over the air" has its difficulties, and some of the dresses have been specially made to suit the cameras. During the ten days some £50,000 worth of fashions will be photographed by the television camera. They will be worn by England's most beautiful mannequins, including Tania Sharman, who has taken a course of how to display fashions "over the air."

Coal Talks.

THE uses to which coal can be put will occupy delegates of the industry from all parts of the country when they gather at the National Coal Convention at Grosvenor House, London, within the next six weeks. The programmes of the meetings, which are now in their fourth year, are in the hands of the delegates and guests, who total more than 600.

In recent years new uses to which coal is put have been quickly discovered. Not only are there better appliances for burning coal with greater efficiency, but there have been found ways and means of turning its by-products into dyes, fertilisers, disinfectants, perfumes, bakelite and even a plastic form of glass.

The production of motor spirit and fuel oil for the Navy is now more than an experiment and becomes a matter of vital national interest. Consequently it will figure largely in the proceedings of the Convention. The Convention will be opened by the President of the Board of Trade, Mr. Oliver Stanley, and Captain Crookshank, Secretary for Mines, will be a guest.

The chairman of the first business session will be Sir Evan Williams, the president of the Mining Association of Great Britain and president of the Coal Utilisation Council.

Athletic Firemen.

THE London Fire Brigade are holding their annual sports meeting to-day at the White City, but this will not affect the strength of London's 60 fire stations. To enable their best athletes to take part in the sports many of the firemen have volunteered for extra duty, and arrangements have been made in case of emergency for those who attend the White City to be recalled to their stations without delay.

A special telephone line has been connected with the fire brigade headquarters, and motor tenders, waiting at the Stadium, will be ready to dash off at a moment's notice.

There will be a newcomer to this year's sports, the newly-formed Auxiliary Fire Service, the "Terriers" of the London Fire Brigade. A number of these auxiliaries will stage a mock rescue and will extinguish the fire in a specially constructed house to demonstrate the value of their new organisation.

The six teams of auxiliaries who are competing have had only twenty hours' training, yet they are already experts in their job. A recruiting campaign will be carried out as part of the day's programme, and recruiting stations will be situated in the Stadium at which both men and women may enrol.

Rod v. Gun.

IF you look up the recreations of Sir Archibald Sinclair you will find shooting duly recorded as one of them. In spite of the fact I understand that he does very little of it.

He has one of the best shootings in Scotland, but I am told that he himself very seldom goes out with the guns to the slaughter of the grouse. I don't pretend to understand why.

It cannot be an objection to taking life, even in its lower forms, for he is a great man with the rod, and the salmon on the river that runs through his estate are probably "suffering" from his activity now.

STORM STRIKES RACE

YOUNG LARNE YACHTSMAN LOSES LIFE

THREE BOATS OVERTURNED

THRILLING EXPERIENCE

Bursting on yachts in a race in Strangford Lough, the thunder and hail storm which swept over Ulster on Friday night led to the loss by drowning of John Marcus, aged 19, an apprentice, who was a member of the Larne Sailing Club.

THE RACE, WHICH WAS BETWEEN THE STRANGFORD LOUGH CLUB AND LARNE, WAS NEAR THE FINISH AS THE STORM BROKE. THREE OF THE YACHTS, SMALL CRAFT OF THE "SNIPE" CLASS, WERE INSTANTLY OVERTURNED AND MOTOR LAUNCHES WENT TO THE RESCUE.

WHEN MR. K. BRADBURY, A LISBURN MEMBER OF THE STRANGFORD CLUB, REACHED THE CAPSIZED YACHT IN WHICH MARCUS WAS SAILING, HE FOUND HIS COMPANION, JAMES MORROW, TIMBER MERCHANT, BALLYGALLY, WHO IS A MEMBER OF THE LARNE CLUB, CAUGHT UNDER A SAIL.

Mr. Bradbury threw a lifebelt to Marcus, who was clinging to the overturned boat, and went to release Morrow. When he had succeeded the rescuers turned towards Marcus and found he was lost.

Weighed down by seaboots and oilskins, Marcus had been swept away, and although a long search was made no trace of his body was found. His brother was on board another yacht.

OTHERS THROWN INTO WATER

The occupants of the other yachts which were in trouble were rescued. Messrs. Inglis and Gray, of the Larne Sailing Club, were thrown into the water, but managed to hold on to the boat until help came.

Mr. E. Dorman, of Strangford, had his boat dismasted, the crew remaining on board until towed inshore.

The tragedy occurred so near the finishing line at Whiterock that many on the shore were witnesses, while being powerless to help. In another 150 yards the yachts would have been at their anchorage.

Among those who took part in the rescue work were Mr. R. Garrett, commodore of Strangford Club; Mr. W. A. Lewis, hon. secretary; and Mr. R. F. Green, together with members of the two sailing clubs.

TO-DAY'S RACING CANCELLED.

The race was declared abandoned, and to-day's racing programme was cancelled. Dragging operations were carried out this afternoon in an effort to recover the body.

The Mill Bay (Islandmagee) Regatta, which was to have been held to-day, was postponed to a future date.

Yachtsmen at Whiterock and Bangor said to-day that the squall was the fiercest in their experience.

"It lasted only about six minutes," said one, "but the boats were practically helpless before it."

ROWING BOAT IN DANGER.

At Bangor the occupants of a rowing boat which was near Ballymacormick Point as the storm burst were saved from a dangerous situation by Mr. A. Finlay, a Bangor yachtsman.

Seeing the boat, in which was a young man, two women, and a small boy, in danger of being swept out to sea, Mr. Finlay and one of his crew rowed to their rescue in their dinghy. The rowing boat was brought alongside the yacht Luffra with some difficulty and the occupants taken on board until the storm abated.

CHANGES IN FLEET FORMATIONS.

OFFICIAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

BATTLESHIPS, BATTLE CRUISERS.

Announcements made in Fleet orders on Friday night will mean that by the summer of next year the Home and Mediterranean Fleets will be back to the formation they were in before the refitting of the Queen Elizabeth class was begun

The Fleet order reads "on completion of their next refits H.M.S. Repulse and H.M.S. Hood will re-commission for service in the Home Fleet, being relieved on the Mediterranean station by H.M.S. Ramillies and H.M.S Royal Oak respectively.

Repulse's re-commission is fixed for January of next year and Hood's for June, 1939.

Preparations for this re-commissioning and relief have to be made well ahead, to make arrangements for leave for the large companies these capital ships carry

The battle-cruisers were stationed in the Mediterranean, as a temporary measure, while the Queen Elizabeth class, which normally should have formed the battleship force there, were at home undergoing refit and modernisation.

Now the Warspite is returning to the Mediterranean, the Barham and Malaya already being on that station, and the Valiant being designed for the Mediterranean next year

The battle-cruisers are to rejoin the Home Fleet at the next convenient opportunity, which falls at the dates given above, at the end of their periods of foreign service. This is the normal procedure in such circumstances.

When Ramillies and Royal Oak have replaced the Repulse and Hood next year, the balance between the home and Mediterranean fleets will be restored.

The complement of the Royal Oak and the Ramillies is 1,009-1,146; the Hood 1,341, and the Repulse 1,181-1,205. The Repulse (32,000 tons) carries six 15-inch guns; the Hood (42,100 tons) eight 15-inch guns; the Ramillies and Royal Oak are both 29,150 tons displacement, and carry eight 15-inch guns.

KILLED WHEN CLIFF CLIMBING.

LANCASHIRE BOY'S FATE.

FELL 100 FEET ON TO ROCKS

A Rochdale stockbroker told the District Coroner at Newquay (Cornwall) on Friday how he saw his 13-year-old son fall 100ft. to his death on the jagged rocks beneath the cliff he was attempting to climb.

The boy, John Stuttard Rhodes, was climbing the Gull Rock, near Newquay, with a friend when he lost his hold.

Describing the tragedy at the inquest, his father, Mr. Walter Rhodes, of Bury Road, Rochdale, said—"When I arrived on the beach the two boys were climbing the rock, being probably about two-thirds of the way up. I attracted John's attention, and motioned him to come down Had I realised the danger I should have told him to stop there, but from where I was the danger was not apparent.

"He commenced to descend, but had not climbed more than two or three yards when he lost his hold, and fell to the bottom among the rocks."

A verdict of accidental death was returned

LORD BELMORE AND GOVERNMENT.

TILT OVER SCHOLARSHIPS.

"BLACKGUARDS" AND "FOOLS."

The Earl of Belmore, D.L., returned to an attack on the Ulster Government when he presided at a meeting of the County Fermanagh Regional Education Committee on Friday.

The matter arose when a letter was read from Mr. James M'Elroy, Tyreghan, Fivemiletown, in regard to the scholarship awarded to John M'Elroy, and stating that the amount awarded was insufficient for his tuition expenses at a secondary school in the North of Ireland. It was, therefore, requested that the scholarship be transferred to Monaghan.

The Ministry of Education, to whom the matter was referred, replied stating that owing to the fact that none of its inspectors had any access to the school for inspection purposes, it was regretted the request could not be acceded to.

Lord Belmore said that this would have been possible had not a lot of blackguards given them away

Mrs. R. O. Hermon, J.P., pointed out that the Northern Ireland schools' inspectors had not access to the Co. Monaghan schools.

Lord Belmore—That is the trouble. They will not make agreement with their neighbours. Stupid of them. a hopeless set of fools. (Laughter.)

No action was taken in the matter.

THE BELFAST PLAYHOUSE.

CO. DOWN COMEDY NEXT WEEK.

Mr. Norway at the Playhouse steadily pursues his policy of giving Ulster audiences Ulster plays, of which they never seem to tire. He again breaks new ground by producing for the first time at the Playhouse Elizabeth Shane's delightful Co. Down comedy, "The Preserving Pan"

Mr Norway's Irish players will include Kathleen V. Rea, who made such a remarkable impression recently when she appeared as the old lady in "The Auction in Killybuck." Robina M'Kay, Millicent Millar, Irene Moore, Lizzie M'Keown, and Nancy Vaughan are all well-known Ulster players and with James Gillen, William M'Culley and those two popular Ulster actors. Robt. Dempster and R. H. M'Candless, it will be freely admitted that no better or stronger cast could be secured.

ADMIRAL HORTHY'S GERMAN VISIT.

NO POLITICAL PACT.

IDENTICAL POLICIES.

"INHABITANT OF THE NAZI CAMP."

In political circles it is insisted that no written agreements are to be expected from the visit to Germany of Admiral Horthy, Hungarian Regent, which is more in the nature of a political demonstration.

Hungarian and German policies are, it is stated, already identical where Soviet Russia and the question of the minorities in Czecho-Slovakia are concerned.

It is not expected in Berlin that Hungary will follow the example set by Bulgaria with the Balkan Entente and reach an agreement with the Little Entente. She is regarded now almost as a permanent inhabitant of the German camp.

HUNGARY'S ASPIRATIONS.

An article by Colonel de Szekely, formerly of the Hungarian General Staff, which appears in Field-Marshal Goering's organ, the "National Zeitung," of Essen, seems to throw some light on Hungarian aspirations where Czecho-Slovakia and rearmament are concerned.

Its publication is a prelude to the conversations which Admiral Horthy and his Ministers will have with Herr Hitler and his chief advisers, states the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post" Berlin correspondent.

Czecho-Slovakia, claims Colonel de Szekely, is the weak point in the defence of Western Europe against Soviet Russia. She could however, be easily dismembered by joint action on the part of her neighbours.

Carpathian Ruthenia, which belonged to Hungary before the Peace Treaties, could, the writer submits, be detached with great ease. The Czecho-Slovak railways dating from the Hapsburg era mostly run north and south, making it difficult to transport troops in a west-east direction.

GUARDIAN OF CARPATHIANS.

"The Carpathians," he explains, can only perform their traditional task as a rampart of European culture if they are in the strong hand of States which are unreservedly anti-Bolshevist and regard it as their task to link their destiny with Great Germany, which has to-day assumed the spiritual and military guardianship of Europe against Bolshevism.

"Great Germany, in alliance with Hungary, which has known the bloody yoke of Bolshevism and whose Regent was the liberator from the Red tyranny, are in combination with Poland, the true guardians of the Carpathians. Hungary forms the outpost and flank protection of Great Germany towards the east.

"But this task," adds the writer, significantly, "can only be carried out if, in the interests of world peace and the protection of European culture, we demand the immediate rearmament of Hungary and the creation of a modern Hungarian army, whose striking power and readiness might help to call a halt to the Bolshevist advance."

OUTRAGES ON STATUE.

Incidents between Czechs and Germans are on the increase in the frontier areas, where the atmosphere is very tense. In Momotau, where a statue to Masaryk is about to be placed, Henleinists put a bust of Herr Hitler on the pediment.

The Czech population organised for Thursday night a volunteer guard for the pediment and caught a party of Henleinists in the act of repeating the outrage of the night before.

A struggle ensued, in which a German was slightly injured. Later a Czech was injured in another clash, so seriously that he had to be taken to hospital. The Black Guards of the Henleinists are appearing openly in uniform and the police in Komotau have been ordered to maintain special vigilance.

NEW FRONTIER VIOLATIONS.

Two new violations of the Czecho-Slovak frontier by German 'planes are reported. Shortly after noon yesterday a German aeroplane appeared over Habartice and after circling the town returned to Germany. In the evening a 'plane came from the direction of Seidenberg, flew over Habartice, and returned to Germany. This constitutes the third and fourth violation of the Czech frontier at this point alone in two weeks.

HENLEIN'S WEDGE

The Henlein Party's news service makes an effort to drive a wedge between the Czecho-Slovak Government and the Czech people by declaring that "the apparently serious intentions of the Prague Government to negotiate are being torpedoed by its own supporters. Conrad Henlein, as representative of the Sudeten Germans, grasped the hand of Dr. Hodza as head of the Czecho-Slovak Government, but Czech, Jewish, and Socialist newspapers have continued to agitate against us. We must not be surprised that the goodwill emphasised by the Government should have created lively dissatisfaction among wide circles of the Czech people."

RUNCIMAN TO DRAFT SUGGESTIONS.

NEW NEGOTIATIONS BASIS.

GERMAN VIEW OF HODZA OFFER.

PRAGUE, Friday.—It is understood that there is likely to be a break of about a week in the discussions which have been commenced between the Czecho-Slovak Government and the representatives of the Sudeten German Party.

During this period Lord Runciman will, it is thought, draft suggestions for a new basis of negotiations.

Definite action by the British mission is now considered imminent, although it is not clear whether Lord Runciman will merely present a memorandum to the parties concerned, or if he will make definite intermediary proposals.

The Berlin newspaper, "Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung," makes no comment upon the announcement that Sudeten Germans are to be given important administrative posts, but the news is significantly headed "posts offered instead of self-government."—Central News.

MUST HAVE JEWISH NAME.

ORDER OPERATES FROM NEW YEAR

BERLIN, Friday.—All Jews in Germany who have "Christian" names will from January 1 next year be obliged to add to their names a typical Jewish name.

For men the name "Israel" has been chosen and for women "Sarah."

Thus a Jew whose name was "Wilhelm Isaacs" would have to change his name to "Israel Wilhelm Isaacs."

A list of "Jewish" names is being prepared by the Ministry of the Interior, and Jews who come under this new decree are required to report the fact to the register office where their birth was registered within a month of the list being published, or at the latest by the end of January.—Central News.

ANOTHER BLOW TO AUSTRIAN JEWS

VIENNA, Friday.—If a tenant is a Jew, that alone is sufficient grounds for evicting him from his domicile, according to an Austrian Court ruling on Friday, notwithstanding any law for the protection of the interests of the tenants. In its ruling, the Court declared that for racial and cultural reasons the existence of a Jewish tenant constituted a definite discomfort to Aryan co-tenants, which they could not be expected to tolerate.—Exchange.

IRISH GUARDS COMMAND.

Major W D. Faulkner, M.C., Irish Guards, has been selected for command of the 1st Battalion Irish Guards, vice Lieut.-Colonel R. B. S. Reford, M.C., who was appointed officer commanding regiment and regimental district on August 16, 1938.

THE NAVAL HUSTLE IN FRANCE.

CONSTRUCTION BEGUN ON 35,000-TON SHIPS.

MODERNISING THE PORTS.

France has begun the construction of 126,000 tons of ships for her Navy, which will bring it abreast and even ahead of Italian and German fleets.

This was foreshadowed by M. Campinchi, Minister of Marine. He announced recently that the Government, by virtue of a decree law, had placed an additional sum of £5,700,000 at the disposal of the Ministry of Marine, thus swelling the Naval budget to £33,500,000

France's Naval strength in 1942, he then stated, would be 50,000 tons higher than that of Italy and 120,000 tons higher than that of Germany.

The additional credits referred to are necessary for the speeding up of the 1938 building programme, which will consist of—

Two new 35,000-ton battleships, two seaplane carriers of 20,000 tons,
Two 8,000-ton cruisers, and
Torpedo craft and submarines.

FIRST LINE STRENGTH.

The two new battleships, the Jean Bart and the Richelieu, forming part of the 1937 building programme, are in course of completion, and soon will be in service with the battleships Dunkerque and Strasbourg.

The first line ships of the French Navy will then consist of six of the most modern battleships, the two new 8,000-ton cruisers of the 1938 programme and the two new seaplane carriers to be built under this programme.

At the same time the Ministry of Marine has ordered the immediate modernisation of all the Naval ports and arsenals, so that they should be brought into line with the requirements of the new fleet, says the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post" Paris correspondent.

Seaplane bases throughout France's overseas empire also will be brought up to date, particularly the important air bases at Bizerta, Daka, Casablanca, Diego-Suarez and Saigon.

At the same time the personnel of the fleet, which last year was 67,000 officers and men and to-day is 65,5000, is to be raised next year to 72,500.

SECRECY IN COURT CASE.

MAN ACCUSED AT CHESTER.

NEWSPAPERMEN KEPT IN DARK.

Officials of Cheshire County Police Force to-day declined to comment upon a report published to-day that a man at present in custody had been charged at Chester with an offence under the Official Secrets Act.

Inquiries show, however, that a man whose identity was not disclosed appeared before a special court composed of Cheshire County magistrates at Chester on Thursday.

Great secrecy was taken in regard to the holding of this Court and none of the local Pressmen was informed that it was being held.

The police stated to-day that a man will appear before a special court at Chester on Monday, but when asked what charge would be preferred against him an official stated, "At the moment this has not been decided."

DOWN FARMER AND SONS IN COURT.

SHEEP-STEALING CHARGE.

FOR TRIAL AT QUARTER SESSIONS.

A special court was held in Dundrum on Friday, before Mr. Robert Bridges, J.P., at which John M'Crea, farmer, Waterask, Dundrum, and his two sons, Richard and Norman M'Crea, of same place, were charged on eleven counts of sheep stealing from different people in different parts of the Lecale and Hilltown (Co. Down) districts within a period of two years.

Sergeant Bothwell, R.U.C., Dundrum, deposed to the arrest of the accused after some of the missing sheep had been identified by different owners.

Constable Allen, Dundrum, also gave evidence.

Mr. M. Johnston, solicitor, Downpatrick, represented the three defendants.

Robert Bell, flesher, 233 Woodstock Road, Belfast, stated that he bought two horned ewes at Colgan's Cattle Market, Belfast, at £1 each. He produced a portion of the horns of each ewe bearing the brand "J. E."

John M'Conville, Goward, Hilltown, Co. Down, deposed to the identification of a ewe at Ballygally, Downpatrick. The animal was one which was stolen from his field some time previously. It was branded on one horn with the letters "M. E.," and had a red keil mark on the back.

John M'Polin, Kinghill, Cabra, Rathfriland, produced a branding-iron, and testified to using this on the horn of a ewe which was stolen from his field in July last. He identified the ewe as the stolen one by the brand and also by a private mark—a notch on the right ear of the sheep.

John Murphy, farmer, Ballymanny, Hilltown, deposed to identifying two sheep at Ballyginney, Dundrum, which he "lost" on May 29, 1937. He produced a horn which was accidentally broken off one of the sheep two years ago. The horn was branded with the letter "M."

F. M'Greevey, Ballygally, Downpatrick, deposed to purchasing a number of sheep from Richard and Norman M'Crea, on different dates.

Thomas Parkinson, Ballygally, Downpatrick, stated that he had a deal with Fred. M'Greevey, on July 13 when he swopped him a black heifer for a bullock and two lambs. M'Greevey afterwards came back for the sheep, stating that he wanted them for different owners.

His Worship returned John M'Crea (father), and Norman M'Crea (son) on bail of £100 each, with two sureties of £50 in each case, for trial at Downpatrick Quarter Sessions. Richard M'Crea was held in custody for trial at the same Court.

Accused reserved their defence.

LADY ANNESLEY PRESENTS PRIZES

The annual dance under the auspices of the Newcastle branch of the Royal National Lifeboat Institution was held in the Central Cafe Hall. Mr. Ellis and Mi. Ruff, during an interval, gave an exposition of modern ballroom dancing. Mr. A. Cairns' dance band supplied the music, and Lady Elizabeth Annesley presented the prizes for spot and other dances.

GAYDA ON BRITISH FINANCE

ITS SOLIDITY RECOGNISED.

ROME, Friday.—Signor Gayda, the official commentator, continues his interpretation of financial conditions in Great Britain, at the same time replying to French financial experts' opinion of this country, states the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post" correspondent.

Signor Gayda recognises our financial solidity, but claims that our trade balance shows an increasing deficit. He points out that Italian finance is based upon patriotism and the self-sacrifice of members of all classes. He makes the extraordinary allegation that Italy was "looted" by the plutocratic democracies after she had "won" the Great War for them.

BOMB OUTRAGE AT TRALEE.

PUBLIC-HOUSE WRECK.

SHOCK FOR TOWNSFOLK.

NO CASES OF INJURY.

The front of a publichouse was badly damaged by bomb explosion in Tralee on Thursday night, the whole town being alarmed.

Townspeople were startled by the explosion, which came from Ashe Street, and people who came running out of their houses to find out what it was all about, found that the licensed premises of Eamon O'Connor, Ashe Street, had been bombed.

The plate-glass windows of the premises were shattered by the explosion, which also blew the lower panel off the front door, and took the inner door off its hinges.

Windows of houses were broken by the force of the explosion, but there was little other damage. The interior of the bar was hardly touched.

Mr. O'Connor was not in the licensed premises at the time, his residence being over his stationery shop, which was next door to the public-house.

The shop was still open at the time that the explosion occurred, and Mr. O'Connor, his wife, and daughter, and the shop attendant had not yet retired.

A Civic Guard was on patrol in the lane near the scene of the incident when it occurred, and he rushed to the place immediately.

Shortly after other members of the force and detectives arrived and investigations commenced, but so far no arrests have been made.

TOY DRUM HERO

66TH BIRTHDAY TO-DAY.

LEAVES RESERVE OF OFFICERS.

Major-General (Hon. Lieut.-General) Sir Tom Bridges, the "Toy Drum Hero of Mons," who is 66 to-day, ceases to belong to the reserve of officers, having attained the age limit. The announcement is made in Friday night's "London Gazette."

A brilliant soldier in the Great War, General Sir Tom is remembered chiefly for the "Tin Band" incident of the Mons retreat. In his own book, "Alarms and Excursions," he told the story thus:—

"The men in the square were a different problem, and so jaded it was pathetic to see them. If one only had a band. I thought why not? There was a toyshop handy which provided my trumpeter and myself with a tin whistle and a drum, and we marched round and round the fountain where the men were lying like the dead, playing the 'British Grenadiers' and 'Tipperary,' and beating the drum like mad."

This was only one of the many adventures in a crowded and adventurous life. Sir Tom's last official post was Governor of South Australia.

SAVING WORLD'S TALLEST BUILDING

FROM LIGHTNING DAMAGE.

RESULT OF TWO YEARS' TESTS.

MOSCOW, Saturday.—After two years of experiment Soviet scientists have evolved methods of protecting the new palace of the Soviets here—claimed to be the world's tallest building—from lightning.

The palace will rise a height of 1,362 feet—114 feet higher than the Empire State building in New York and 377 feet taller than the Eiffel Tower in Paris.

After hundreds of experiments with a model made of rustless steel scientists propose that the new building should be provided with metal plates at every point capable of "attracting" lightning. These plates will be between one and a half and two yards wide and connected to earth.

Tests show that these will completely protect the palace and particularly the 325 foot tall statue of Lenin which will surmount it.

While the palace is being built a balloon will be sent up to a height of nearly 2,000 feet. It will have an earthed cable, and its purpose will be to intercept all lightning discharges.—Reuter.

MAGISTRATE WARNS UNWANTED ALIENS.

LANDING WITHOUT PERMIT.

"WILL ENFORCE LAW FULLY."

Mr. Herbert Metcalfe, the Old Street (London) magistrate, said yesterday that it was becoming an outrage the way in which stateless Jews were pouring in from every port to this country. As far as he was concerned, he intended to enforce the law to the fullest extent.

He passed sentence of six months' hard labour, with a recommendation for deportation, on three people described as John Samuel Bockner (30), photographer; Mendel Flerman (32), tailor; and Henrietta Weiss (32), barmaid—all of Tudog Houses, Hackney.

They were accused that, being aliens of uncertain nationality, they were found in the United Kingdom, having landed without leave of an immigration officer.

Gutta Kenachman (32), described as British, and giving the same address as the other three defendants, was discharged under the Summary Jurisdiction Act. She had been charged that she knowingly harboured Bockner.

The magistrate said that it was clear that she relied on Bockner, for she had consented to marry him. He had no reason to doubt her story.

It was stated that Bockner was born at Minsk, Russia. Flerman was born in Warsaw, and had stated that he had been married to Weiss according to Jewish rites.

Mr. Clifford Watts, who appeared for all the defendants, said that Bockner left Russia when quite young, had been to America and Canada, and had travelled about. He could not go back to Russia, and if given a chance would leave Britain within two or three days.

Flerman had to fly from Berlin, and met Weiss, who was born there. Her brother was arrested and shot. After that she led a most uncomfortable life, and stated that she was persecuted. He (Mr. Watts) was instructed that they were making their way to friends in Africa when they were arrested.

NOT ALL "CADS" AT CAMBRIDGE.

Dr. Margaret Murray's remarks to the anthropologists of the British Association on Friday upon the bad manners of Cambridge University folk towards the town's people has caused some excitement in Cambridge.

Professor H. R. Dean, Vice-Chancellor of the University, was asked by a Central News representative if he had any comment to make.

"I have no intention of defending Cambridge," he replied. "I think the university is quite well able to stand up to Dr. Murray's attack."

Dr. C. P. Snow, of Christ College, said: "Rude undergraduates do exist, but it is unwise to judge a composite body of 6,000 people on the kind of person mentioned by Dr. Murray."

In her talk Dr. Murray referred to Cambridge "cads" and "dons who go about as if they owned the place." "There is a patronising attitude of the universities towards the townsfolk which is rather akin to that of the white man towards the black "underdog" in tropical countries."

MR. MILNE BARBOUR.

VISIT TO SOUTH AMERICA.

SPEAKS ON IRISH SITUATION.

South American newspapers received by the "Telegraph" contain interviews with Right Hon. J. Milne Barbour, the Northern Ireland Minister of Commerce, who is on holiday with his daughter.

The Buenos Ayres "Standard" carries a prominently headed column account in which Mr. Barbour speaks of the situation between North and South in Ireland. A similar article appears in the "Herald" published in the same city. The Spanish language papers also record his visit pictorially.

In one interview Mr. Barbour said: "We entertain no animosity towards the South and would be glad to see them prosperous and contented. But we do resent that they should wish to bring Northern Ireland into the Free State—now known as Eire."

Mr. Barbour travelled in the liner Arlanza, now on its last voyage, and flew from Rio de Janeiro to Buenos Ayres. Though he has crossed the Atlantic 106 times, it is his first visit to South America.

GUIDE FOR BOOKLOVERS

Young Writer's Brilliant Novel

☆

"REBECCA." Daphne Du Maurier (Gollancz, 8/6).

"REBECCA" is destined to be a memorable book in more ways than one. Miss Du Maurier has shown great courage in working with old familiar materials associated with "barn-storming" playing companies, but she handles them so fearlessly with such a perfect sense of the stage that never once does a giggle arise that could so easily turn into ridicule.

This is a triumphant return to the unsophisticated fiction of Victorian romance inspired and vitalised with such drama and vividness that might have emanated from Haworth Parsonage.

"Rebecca" might almost have been written by the author of "Jane Eyre." There are many similarities in the story and the characters, but Miss Du Maurier comes out of the comparison not as a colourless copyist but as a modern rival. Her task is the harder of the two, for where the Brontes blazed their own trail in romance for a public whose taste in fiction was of necessity confined, the modern novelist brings his wares to a crowded and sophisticated market.

Artificiality was the keynote of the romantic fiction of the 19th century; "Rebecca" is also founded in artifice, but it is done so boldly that Miss Du Maurier gets away with it every time.

The heroine, who tells her own story, is insignificant—poor, plain, barely out of the schoolroom, with shabby clothes and unpolished behaviour. She meets Maxim de Winter, head of an old family, in Monte Carlo while she is a paid companion to an objectionable old vulgarian.

☆

FEELING Of Inferiority

IT is hard to imagine why he marries her except as a last effort to forget the tragedy that had robbed him, twelve months before, of his first wife. They return to England, to Manderley, that great show place on the west coast, one of the stately homes of England. The young bride is intimidated with all its splendours and oppressed by her feeling of inferiority. Manderley with its almost legendary beauty, its vast stone corridors, its perfectly furnished rooms, its great shut-up wing facing the sea, is impregnated with memories of its former perfect chatelaine.

Rebecca lives also in the memories of the servants, most of all with Mrs. Danvers, the appalling old housekeeper whose sinister behaviour and cult of Rebecca repels and fascinates her new mistress. Maxim, too, changes with his environment, seems to be mentally comparing the graciousness of his first wife with the nervous blunderings of her childish successor.

The brooding atmosphere of the great house is broken into life for the first time at the yearly Manderley fancy dress ball, when we realise for the first time that the trouble lies deeper than a widower's grieving for a loved wife drowned at sea. Things begin to happen, the pace quickens, the already strained tension becomes almost unbearable, but there is still more to come.

When the moment of crisis arrives, and the heroine sees that she is no longer fighting a hopeless battle against the memory of a dead woman, when the beloved Maxim is threatened with open danger, the timid unobtrusive wife forgets all her short-comings, she steps into the limelight and rises to heights of heroism.

☆

SUSPENSE To Last Page

IT would spoil the book for the reader to give away the surprises, for Miss Du Maurier's story is so brilliantly constructed that the suspense is kept up to the last page. These last chapters when the secret of Manderley comes to light are extraordinarily well done; they leave the reader literally breathless with excitement.

"Rebecca" is a book that by its nature leaves itself open to criticism. It belongs to a type that, like the little girl in the nursery rhyme who when she was good was very, very good, and was unmentionable when she was bad. It can be accused of having all the old tricks of melodrama, of being heavily serious, over romantic and entirely lacking in humour. It is all these things, but in spite of it, so well are they blended and used, it never steps over the frail boundary that separates the mysterious and dramatic from the ridiculous.

The shut-up wing, the rotting boathouse, the idiot wandering in the overgrown wood, the unbalanced housekeeper, the flashy cousin, the faithful land-agent, are all old familiars of which Miss Du Maurier has made triumphant use.

For so young a writer this is a remarkable achievement. Its rapid success gives proof, if any is needed, that the reading public prefer romance in the grand old tradition.

"Rebecca" is what may be termed a totalitarian novel. It ignores all theories, discussions, outside events and irrelevancies and concerns itself solely with the narrative and its effect on a few characters in one house in a remote spot.

It is this regard for the "unities" and concentration on bare essentials that gives it such a dramatic quality so that it reveals itself before the eyes like a stage presentation. Miss Du Maurier has made a bold bid for success which has fully justified itself.

The Gunman of Corsica

Six-Minute Story: No. 12, by Michael Kent

A track crossed the mountain side below him lacing the slope to a crest and dropping beyond it to a valley. A man on a donkey, sitting well astern and leading a pack mule, passed singing a snatch of opera. From Hoffman it was "She has fled my turtle dove."

Though he knew Corsica for a land of incongruities Eustace smiled at that as he passed on.

PLAINLY Eustace had taken the wrong fork of the stream. The concierge of the hotel at Vizavona had told him the way. One went "upstairs," he had explained till one came to a waterfall and beyond that the stream forked. One branch was barren, but the other was full of trout of a flavour. . . . The concierge kissed his fingers to denote the exquisite flavour of the pink trout that swam in that delectable stream.

The like existed nowhere else in Corsica.

Eustace, although he carried creel and rod, was not unduly downcast by his error. Cyclamen, bracken and moss were at his feet, an incredible blue above. The tinkle of water, buzz of many coloured flies and the far-off chugging of the little mountain train climbing the pass to Bastia made it not at all a place for killing even a luscious trout.

* * * *

IDLY he followed the ravine till the trees gave out and the stream ended in a spring that bubbled under a wet rock sprayed with fern.

From the edge of the ravine he judged he should find a view. He was right.

He looked westward, across scarp after scarp of forest where, four thousand feet below, like a silver thread, the brawling Grayonne hurried to Ajaccio. Here and there the flayed trunks of cork oaks showed like gouts of blood and, like a patch of gold, here and there he saw a cottage or a mortuary chapel by the white wayside.

Myrtle and bramble, blackthorn, brake and ling matted the nearer slopes below a bank of screes lodged on the neck of Monte d'Oro's copper dome.

A cry from behind him made him turn. "Monsieur goes to give a pourboire to the rabbits!"

* * * *

A SPINE of thorn had caught the coat of Eustace as he passed, tilting his note case out of his pocket.

"A thousand thanks," he said, "I was lost in admiration of your beautiful country. I would not have noticed it."

"Il n'y a pas de quoi," returned the stranger. He was short, thin and eager, clad in black corduroy, a blue peaked casquette and heavily hob-nailed boots. He carried a rifle and Eustace judged him to be some sort of wood reeve or forester.

"You enjoy the view, monsieur?" he inquired.

"Extremely," said Eustace. "You also?".

The young man scanned the slashed ravines below.

"I am not here to enjoy the view," he said.

"No," agreed Eustace. "To hunt, rather."

The man was after goats or mountain sheep, he decided, or he would not carry a rifle.

"To hunt perhaps," echoed the stranger, as one whose brain was busier with his eyes than with his tongue. "You do not take me for a peasant of the countryside about his business."

"Your speech is, pardon me, not of the island," returned Eustace.

"Yet I am an islander," the young man returned frankly. "Mattei Batiste, native of Vivario, down there. Sergeant of Chasseurs Alpines, stationed at Villefranche on the mainland these three years."

"Here for a holiday?" asked Eustace.

"To settle my father's affairs."

Batiste crossed himself.

"I am sorry your visit has so sad an occasion," said Eustace quickly.

"Monsieur is very amiable," replied Batiste, in a low voice and returned to his vigil.

"But your time is not all occupied with business," said Eustace, tapping the breech of Mattei's rifle.

"I have to see a man to settle an account," said Mattei. "I think I will meet him this morning."

"At least," agreed Eustace, "you have chosen a good observation post."

"It is the road to Dominecca," said Mattei.

It was some sort of a saint's day and suddenly the bells rang out from a dozen hidden villages, sounding very clear in the still air.

"If monsieur has not seen Dominecca he must go there," resumed Mattei, "a village, a church, a fountain, oh, but picturesque."

"Another day," said Eustace. "I have walked far enough."

* * * *

"THE car of Nonce Susini comes to arrive," said Mattei, flickering his eyelids. "Monsieur can be sure of a lift. One makes a pretty little wine there and the olives are a thing remarkable."

"Monsieur Susini may not be willing," protested Eustace, but was overborne. If he stopped Susini on the crest, on the very crest, for sometimes a car was difficult to start on the hill, Mattei assured him he would not be refused.

Five minutes later Eustace sat watching the road below on the crest, on the very crest where Mattei had directed. Soon he heard a car, later he saw it trailing a cloud of dust, raging up the zig-zags hardly slackening in the bends. As it roared along the straight towards him he stood in its path holding out his rod.

The open Citroen jerked to a stop beside him. A thin bearded driver, his hand still on the clutch, spoke.

"What is it that it is? Quick, sir, I beg."

* * * *

THE man gave a queer jerk and clutched his side. A red splotch appeared and spread on his yellow shirt. He crumpled in his place as the sharp clack of a rifle shot rang and echoed down the valley. Eustace saw from the rock where he had spoken with Mattei a thin blue puff of smoke drift into invisibility against the green.

"What is it?" he cried, supporting the injured man.

"It is one of the Mattei," muttered Susini. "In a quarrel last week I killed their father. I would have been safe in Dominecca."

Eustace tried to move him from the wheel so that he himself could drive. The man protested feebly.

"Assez, assez, monsieur. It is finish for me. . . . He got me against the skyline standing still . . . Tant pis."

"I will get a doctor—the police," said Eustace.

"The police!" A faint, almost derisive, grin curled the man's blue lips. "It is not their affair," he whispered. "I have a little son. He will see to it when he grows up." His fingers scrabbled on the canvas of the seat. "Tell him I said so," he murmured. "Tell . . ."

Sidelights on Surnames—Laurie

AS long as there are sweet singers to sing, the English-speaking world will love to hear this name.

"Maxwelton's braes are bonnie,
Where early fa's the dew,
And it's there that Annie Laurie
Gave me her promise true."

It was a storied old name in Maxwelton, and there was a real Annie Laurie. It might be said that the name itself was coined by affection, for Laurie is no more than an intimate Scots abbreviation for Laurence. It was often rendered as Lawrie, and sometimes as Lawrey.

* * * *

The baronetcy of the Lauries of Maxwelton dates back to the seventeenth century. There is a famous story of Sir Robert Lawrie. When Anne of Denmark came to Scotland with James the Sixth she had in her suite a Dane of mighty stature and vast drinking powers. He had an ebony whistle which was laid at the table at the commencement of his orgies, and whoever was the last to be able to blow it, everybody else having been overcome by the bottle, was to carry off the whistle as a trophy of victory. He had remained undefeated at the Courts of Copenhagen, Moscow, Stockholm, and elsewhere, but Sir Robert Laurie of Maxwelton, after three days and three nights hard contest, left the Dane under the table,

"And blew on the whistle his requiem shrill."

It is Robert Burns who tells the tale, and the poet made his ballad of "The Whistle" from it. The real Annie Laurie was the eldest of three daughters of Sir Robert Laurie, and the poet who was in love with her and sang of her beauty was William Douglas, of Fingland, in Kircudbright.

* * * *

Burns himself knew others of the name. In a letter to Dr. Archibald Lawrie he sends compliments to the young ladies, "particularly the fair musician, whom I think much better qualified than ever David was, or ever could be, to charm an evil spirit out of Saul."

William Laurie was factor to the second Marquis of Douglas, and suffered imprisonment for befriending Covenanters.

Lieut.-Colonel D. R. Laurie, who was private secretary to the Chief of the Imperial General Staff in the Great War, is now at Scotland Yard and chief of the mounted police.

SEA-BATHING.

APART from the benefits of exposure of the body to sun and air, sea-bathing has a general tonic effect. The action of the waves stimulates the circulation and causes good deep breathing of pure air.

Also, swimming is one of the finest exercises known because all the important muscles of the body are brought into action.

Frequently the good effects of a bathe are spoilt by remaining in the sea until the natural healthy glow gives way to shivering and excessive coldness.

Sea-bathing is often of great value to people who have been run down in health, but it is advisable to start with warmed sea baths indoors.

This Dip was His Debut

With this excellent snap of a first dip at Bangor, Mrs. W. Gough, of 57 Knockeden Park, Rosetta, Belfast, wins this week's half-guinea in our Happy Childhood Photograph Competition.

Entries for next week's contest, which should arrive not later than first post on Wednesday, August 24, should be addressed "Child Photograph Competition," Belfast Telegraph, Royal Avenue, Belfast. A stamped envelope should be enclosed for the return of your print.

Remember, the happier the snap the better the chance it has of a prize.

A PLAIN MAN'S SERMON

Prayer—And What It Means

☆

THERE are probably some [illegible] people in this country [illegible] say a prayer.

Some, of course, honestly be[illegible] praying is no good and [illegible] difference to anything. Ot[illegible] "What is the use of informing [illegible] my needs, which He knows [illegible] Others again, convinced [illegible] universe is based on fixed [illegible] you that if prayer could a[illegible] laws, it would be a mir[illegible] "miracles do not happen!" T[illegible] are some who have given u[illegible] because "their prayers a[illegible] answered."

All these objections, however [illegible] a misunderstanding of what [illegible] really is, and the true object [illegible]

People persist in thinking that [illegible] means asking God for what [illegible] But, whilst it is true that the[illegible] place in prayer for asking, yet [illegible] for things is neither the wh[illegible] prayer, nor by any means th[illegible] important part of it. Prayer [illegible] verse with God, and the chief [illegible] of it is to keep us in personal [illegible] with Him.

When we speak of our spiritual [illegible] what we really mean is that part of us which we call "I," or our self—our personality, our character. It is that part of us which is either good or bad; keeps or loses its temper; is generous or mean; selfish or unselfish; cheerful or discontented.

This personality of ours needs to be kept up to the mark; for all around us are forces—people, things, customs, temptations, suggestions, ideas—which tend to influence our personality in a downward direction.

☆

POWER Of Suggestion

ONE thing about which we have been learning so much lately is the reality of spiritual forces. It becomes increasingly plain that the one entirely real thing in the universe is spirit.

The means by which spiritual forces act upon us are found in influence and suggestion; and for a great part of every day the personalities of most of us are exposed to the action of influences and suggestions which are certainly not of the highest. Some of them are positively evil; and we have but a poor chance of being at our best, unless, in some way or other, we take steps to counteract all this stream of downgrade influence which is pouring over us daily. And the only thing which can really counteract it is some influence which is wholly good.

If we wish to be at our best and to stand upright, we must keep in touch with forces and suggestions which are good and true and great. The reality and power of influence is one of the commonplaces of human life.

We can be made (and that quite easily) either cheerful or depressed, courageous or cowardly, selfish or unselfish, by the influence of other people upon us. And if merely human personalities can have such a real and powerful effect upon us, what must be the effect of the personality and influence of God brought to bear upon us?

God is light and love and beauty and truth and courage and goodness. He is the source and well-spring of everything that is beautiful and true.

The more closely, therefore, we can keep in touch with Him, put ourselves under His influence, open up our minds to the suggestions of Him "from Whom all holy desires, all good counsels and all just works do proceed," the better for us.

☆

OUR Friends' Influence

INFLUENCE is brought to bear most simply and directly by converse and communion between two people. When we pray, therefore, our immediate and (in the first instance) only [illegible] is to get into touch with God, and [illegible] open up our hearts and minds [illegible] the good and beautiful infl[illegible] which radiate from Him.

Just as sunlight is the source of physical health, so God is the source of spiritual health, and it is simply a question of placing ourselves beneath His rays.

Prayer is just the very simple means by which we make it possible for God['s] influence to be brought to bear upon ourselves. If we never speak to God or seek His face, we remain outside all this potential influence for g[illegible] which otherwise would be flowing [illegible] from Him and in upon us.

When, for instance, we are fee[illegible] selfish, we need a fresh supply [illegible] unselfishness, or love, from God, W[illegible] is full of it Himself.

When we are short of temper, we [illegible] more good-temper from the [illegible] source.

When we are afraid, contact with [illegible] will put new courage into us, [illegible] when we are worried or depressed [illegible] few minutes spent in His company [illegible] cheer us up and fill us with new [illegible] and hope.

Asking does not necessarily come [illegible] it. This is simply a question [illegible] contact. Thoroughly cheerful fr[illegible] will raise our drooping spirits [illegible] if we merely go and talk to them [illegible] five minutes. We do not need t[illegible] them for cheerfulness; we merely [illegible] to go and see them.

Saying your prayers is simply go[illegible] see God for five minutes; and is [illegible] extremely likely that the man [illegible] woman who has begun the day [illegible] doing this, will, in consequence, s[illegible] that day more cheerfully, [illegible] courageously, more unselfishly, [illegible] honestly in business affairs, [illegible] patiently under annoyances, tha[illegible] he or she had begun it without ha[illegible] come into contact with anyone so g[illegible] and beautiful as God?

"Go and see" Him for five minutes bef[illegible] you begin your day. It will make [illegible] difference.

THE LAST TEST MATCH

O'REILLY'S TEST CENTURY

[illegible] 4,500 cricket enthusiasts—some [illegible] had waited all night—stood all [illegible] the Kennington Oval to-day [illegible] before the gates opened for the [illegible] of the final Test Match between England and Australia.

The earliest arrivals were men who [illegible] boxes outside the gates and later [illegible] positions to other people. [illegible], however, was discouraged [illegible].

[illegible] genuine enthusiasts were a woman from Canterbury [illegible] who had left their homes at [illegible] Friday. Next to them in the [illegible] which numbered about 50 - by [illegible] a party of youths from Nor[illegible]. "We have had no rain at all," [illegible] them said. "It has been quite [illegible] night."

[illegible] there was a long queue outside [illegible] entrance. At the schoolboys' [illegible] near the Hobbs' Gate, there [illegible] large crowd before six o'clock.

The gates were not opened until 13 minutes past nine and the people at [illegible] began to stream steadily into the ground. Every available cheap seat had been taken less than a quarter of an hour after the turnstiles had started clicking. The terraces behind the seats and the space between the seats and the boundary were also quickly filled.

Twelfth men—Fagg (England), and E. S. White (Australia).

Although nearly everyone came prepared for rain, early indications were that the day's cricket would not be interrupted by the weather, patches of blue sky showing between fleecy clouds. A fresh breeze blew across the ground, and most of the spectators wrapped themselves in coats or mackintoshes.

Following the withdrawal on Friday of Ames and Wright, of Kent, both injured in the Oakham match against Leicestershire, came almost birthday Test honours for Arthur Wood, the Yorkshire wicketkeeper, who was summoned to take the place of Ames. He will be 40 on Thursday next.

Wood's inclusion meant that Yorkshire had five representatives among the party of thirteen ready for the game against Australia.

Since he succeeded Dolphin in the Yorkshire XI. in 1927 Wood has gone from strength to strength. He is a wicketkeeper batsman not capable of such big scores as Ames but he is a valuable man in a crisis. Against the Australians at Sheffield in the match Yorkshire so nearly won Wood made 41—the highest score for the county in that game. In 1935 Wood scored 1,000 runs, thus setting up a record for a Yorkshire wicketkeeper, and also hit a century—his first in first-class cricket—against Worcestershire at Sheffield.

WOOD'S DASH BY CAR.

Not until he arrived at Nottingham on Friday night for the county match was Wood informed that his presence was required at the Oval.

There was no train by which he could reach London in time for the game, so he set out by car to travel the 130 miles to London by road. Before he could start he had to wait for an hour and a half to obtain his cricket bag, arriving by train from Scarborough, and it was not until 8-45 p.m that he was able to set off.

The accidents to Ames and Wright, coupled with the slight doubt as to the fitness of Bowes, placed the England selectors in something of a quandary.

No official invitation to players had been issued since the calling up of Wood, but as a precautionary measure, Nichols, of Essex, had received some sort of hint to be on the spot with his cricket gear. Essex had no match to-day. The selectors finally decided to leave out Fagg, who was given the job of twelfth man, and Goddard.

There was a big drop in the temperature, with a decidedly fresh wind, but the sun shone as the crowd assembled, and though there were plenty of clouds [illegible] the weather seemed likely to keep fine.

England's batting order was announced as—Hutton, Edrich, Leyland, Hammond, Paynter, Compton, Hardstaff, Wood, [illegible] Farnes, and Bowes.

The final choice of England's eleven [illegible]ted an intention to play as many [illegible] as possible. Compared with the team beaten at Leeds there were [illegible] changes, Hutton, Leyland, and [illegible] all Yorkshiremen, coming in for [illegible] Wright, and Price.

The selector's part of his duties having been settled, Hammond walked out [illegible] Bradman to the middle, and for [illegible] time won the toss for England. [illegible] there was no toss at Old Trafford. [illegible] phenomenal luck recalled the [illegible] of F. S. Jackson in 1905, when, [illegible] his captaincy, England batted first [illegible] five games and won the rubber.

M'CORMICK OFF.

[illegible] announcement of the Australian [illegible] revealed a big surprise; the absence [illegible] M'Cormick, the fast bowler, who is [illegible] by neuritis in the shoulder. [illegible] a way, evened up the bowling [illegible] of the competing teams, for [illegible] had to depend heavily on [illegible] men: O'Reilly, Fleetwood-Smith, [illegible] Waite, to get their opponents out. [illegible] M'Cormick's trouble must have developed [illegible] suddenly, for he was bowling [illegible] the nets on Friday. At last Barnes made his way into Aus[illegible] Test eleven, and his inclusion [illegible] of M'Cormick, was the one team [illegible] from that last on duty. If [illegible] Australia potentially were a [illegible] batting combination, for B. A. [illegible] could be reckoned a better batsman [illegible] Wood.

[illegible] announcement of the Australian [illegible] order showed Badcock No. 1 for [illegible] and Fingleton No. 7. Badcock [illegible] goes in first for South Australia. [illegible] can be deceiving, but an [illegible] of the covered Oval pitch [illegible] Hammond that first innings [illegible] England was the correct procedure. [illegible] Promptly at half past eleven the [illegible] Test opened with Waite bowling from the Vauxhall end to Hutton. After a maiden first over, Edrich opened England's score with a single off M'Cabe. Hutton did not get off the mark until the fourth over.

More Oval History

THE first cricket match with Australia was played at the Oval in 1880. England won by five wickets. The two first Test centuries were scored there, W. G. Grace getting 152 for England and W. L. Murdoch, who was of Scottish descent, 153 not out for Australia. Murdoch afterwards settled in England, and played for the latter country versus South Africa.

ONCE A MARKET GARDEN.

The Oval is first mentioned in 1818 as a market garden. In that year, the River Effra overflowed its banks and flooded it. It was still a market garden in 1844, when the Montpelier C.C. took it over. Their headquarters, at the Beehive Tavern, Walworth, with cricket ground adjacent, had to be moved owing to the pulling down of the building. They obtained a 31 years' lease from the Duchy of Cornwall, owners of the ground. This lease was granted to William Baker, a noted cricketer of his time and an outstanding local business personality.

In 1845, the first sod at the Oval was laid. The same year saw the first match, Montpelier v. Mitcham, arranged. Fittingly enough, the historic contest ended in a tie.

Bad management threatened the Oval with extinction as a sports centre, but generous sportsmen came forward to save the situation.

RESULTS TO DATE.

These are the Oval results to date:—England won by five wickets, 1880; Australia by 7 runs, 1882; drawn, 1884; England, innings and 217 runs, 1886; England, innings and 137 runs, 1888; England, 2 wickets, 1890; England, innings and 43 runs, 1893; England, 66 runs, 1896; drawn, 1899; England, 1 wicket, 1902; drawn, 1905; drawn, 1909; England, 244 runs, 1912; drawn, 1921; England, 289 runs, 1926; Australia, innings and 29 runs, 1930; and Australia, 562 runs, 1934.

Although the stands were pretty nearly full, there was still plenty of room for the 3s unreserved spectators, and 25,000 would be an optimistic estimate of the crowd while England's new opening pair were playing themselves in. Runs soon came faster, and Hutton made one wristy late cut off M'Cabe to register the first boundary shot.

O'REILLY ON; EDRICH OUT.

After half an hour England had scored 20 runs, and the bowling for the start of a Test Match had been very ordinary. The appearance of O'Reilly at this juncture presaged a harder task for batsmen. The usual pair of short led fieldsmen took up position, and, although the master bowler began with a no-ball, one soon sensed a keener spirit in the cricket.

Next came Fleetwood-Smith, and the two bowlers upon whom Australia banked so heavily were on in sequence after the total reached 26.

Hassett followed one glorious "stop" by missing the next ball, driven straight by Edrich, and three runs resulted. So far there had not been a sign of a false stroke, but O'Reilly struck home with England's score only 29, getting Edrich l.b.w. and incidentally bringing his number of wickets against England to exactly 100. The Middlesex man was merely playing back, seeking to avoid the Fingleton-Brown leg trap.

Leyland joined his county colleague—there were, by the way, five Yorkshiremen in England's ranks—and scored off the first ball bowled to him. Next over Fleetwood-Smith turned a ball quickly from leg and beat Leyland's bat, but too much to hit the wicket.

This innings was to be a battle of batsmen against spin bowling, whereas the make-up of England's team indicatel main reliance upon pace bowlers.

The ball occasionally turned, even this early in the match, and Waite, who at 43 took over from Fleetwood-Smith, also spun a ball now and again. Hutton played a very capable game, avoiding risks and "finding" O'Reilly without fault.

LEYLAND'S CLOSE CALL.

England's first 50, completed when Hutton drove O'Reilly to the off boundary, went up after 75 minutes. Leyland scraped home when a lightning throw in by Bradman caught him backing up too far.

O'Reilly's first spell, lasting three-quarters of an hour, was nine overs for 19 runs.

Scores of people watched the play from the windows of several new blocks of flats erected since the last appearance of a Test side on Surrey's ground.

It was noticeable that after O'Reilly went off the batsmen were most disposed to force runs, and Leyland off-drove two successive balls from Fleetwood-Smith to the fence.

Australia's attack looked strongest when Waite and O'Reilly were operating. In a new spell by the Irishman, Hutton hit through the leg-trap, but Leyland missed a chance of punishing a long hop from Waite.

No one expected a rush of runs in the opening of a Test to be played out, and in the circumstances the scoring rate was reasonably good.

In the two hours before lunch, England scored 89. Hutton had three-quarters of an hour's start of his partner, and yet scored only four more runs, but he batted with fine determination and played the spin bowling with confidence.

WINS OF SIR T. DIXON, H.M.L.

Messrs R. J Allam, Ltd., held at their premises, Oxford Street, Belfast, on Friday, their first show and sale of crossbred eles, and there was a plentiful turnout from all the important exhibitors in the Province.

The judges were Mr. George Low, Agricultural Research Institute, Hillsborough, and Mr. George Little, Drumdarragh estate of Sir Thomas Dixon, HML

The following were the awards and prices—

Best pen of hogget ewes—1 and champion of the show, Sir Thomas Dixon, Bart., H.M.L., 63s; 2 and reserve champions, Mr. Alex. Jennings, 51s; 3, Mr. J. M'Allister, 48s; reserve, Sir Thos. Dixon, Bart., H.M.L., 48s; v.h.c., Mr. J. A. Crawford 48s 6d; h.c., Mr. T. M'Lornan, 46s; and commended, Mr. Jas. M'Dowell, 47s.

Of breeding sheep there was an entry of 750 head, and buyers attending well, trade ruled firm. Good types of crossbred hogget ewes made 37s to 45s, seconds 30s to 35s, and older crossbred ewes according to fuality, 28s to 40s. A number of pure-bred and cross-Suffolk ewes were sold. Top price was 47s, while other pens made from 36s to 44s. It is rather early for blackface ewes, and those offered could only be classed second grade. Top price was 32s, and the remainder ranged between 20s and 27s.

LIVE FAT PIGS.

At the weekly sale of live fat sows and boars there was an increase in numbers. First grade Yorks recorded 40s to 43s per live cwt.; secondary sorts 38s to 39s; and rougher aged sorts 35s to 37s. The highest figures recorded for sows was £13 10s, and boars £3.

FOOTBALL IN DERRY

ANNUAL MEETING OF CITY CLUB.

BRANDYWELL FACILITIES.

APPEAL FOR BETTER SUPPORT.

Complaints regarding the inadequacy of the facilities for players and spectators at Brandywell were made at the annual meeting of the shareholders of Derry City Football Club on Friday evening, Sir Dudley M'Corkell, D.L. (chairman of the directors), presiding.

Sir Dudley, referring to the balance sheet, said the figures did not make very rosy reading. They could, however, congratulate the team on last season's performances. They were an unlucky team, particularly at crucial periods, when they were heavily hit by injuries. Even at the beginning of this season they had been unfortunate. There was one bright spot, and that was the increase in the number of ticket holders last season.

Sir Dudley criticised those alleged supporters who, Saturday after Saturday, tried to see the matches without paying. It was a poor thing to see hundreds of Derrymen trying to look through or over something to see the match. It looked more like Aberdeen than Derry. (Laughter.)

The Chairman appealed for more support, and said if they did not get it they might have to sell one of their best players. The cost of team maintenance was down. They had done their part, and it was up to the public to do theirs.

Mr. A. C. Muir again raised the question of the provision of covered accommodation on the unreserved side. Until they had such proper accommodation they would not get good home gates. The Corporation had been approached, but nothing had been done. Was there no one in the Corporation who had any interest in the club? Since the club started there had been less drinking in the city and more harmony amongst the citizens.

"PUSHING AN OPEN DOOR."

Sir Dudley said Mr. Muir was pushing an open door. He quite agreed with Mr. Muir's views, and added that if the public provided them with a credit balance one of the first things they would do would be to provide that accommodation. He had told one corporator that it was disgraceful to take money from any club for Brandywell as a football ground. The trouble with the pitch was that there was too much football played on it.

Mr. J. C. Mitchell said it was a downright shame that the ground was in the condition it was. The Corporation had expended £60 in putting a hoarding round the tennis courts; he didn't mind that, but it seemed to be a one-sided affair. The ratepayers, he was sure, would not grumble if some money were spent in ground improvements. Football had done a lot of good in the city, and it was a shame to have the ground in such a condition.

The Chairman said he was sure that if a plebiscite were taken the majority of the ratepayers would be in favour of the expenditure for improvements.

Continuing, he said they needed more encouragement from the people in Derry. Their away gates in the League averaged £150, while their home gates only averaged £109. They were depending on outside support to keep them going, and that was not as it should be.

Mr. Mitchell said they had done all they could for the public. Brandywell was a laughing-stock to visitors who came to the city. The facilities in the pavilion were ridiculous.

TO APPROACH CORPORATION.

It was agreed, on the motion of Mr. Mitchell, that the directors should again approach the Corporation with a view to having repairs and improvements carried out at the ground, and failing that that an extraordinary meeting of shareholders should be called to appoint a deputaion to go before the Corporation.

Mr. W. D. Aicken complained of the transport facilities to the ground, and said the club should approach the Transport Board and ask them to organise a proper transport service to the matches.

Mr. J. C. Mitchell also criticised those who did not pay for admission, and said when coming from one match two men perched on a tree made such comments as "That's the team we are paying for," and "Come on off, what are we paying for."

Sir Basil M'Farland, Sir Dudley M'Corkell and Mr. J. T. Towers were re-elected as directors, and Mr. James Logan as auditor.

The Advisory Committee was reappointed, Mr. Mitchell remarking that it was a "wash out."

Votes of thanks were passed to the chairman, Mr. Gillespie, the manager, and to the players.

Sir Dudley said they had the greatest confidence in Mr. Gillespie who was well known and respected.

ALPINE DRAMA.

MOUNTAIN-CLIMBERS DEFY "OGRE."

WHERE NINE PERISHED.

BATTLE WITH 13,000-FT. PEAK.

To those with no head for heights all mountain-climbers are crazy; but climbers divide themselves into two schools: sportsmen who try to reach their objective with a minimum of risk, and danger-loving fatalists who want to do it the hard way.

Among the latter group, Germans are outstanding. In the past decade they have succeeded in scaling seemingly impregnable peaks all over the world.

That the Alpine Eigerwand (wall of the ogre) resisted their perennial attacks piqued German mountaineers.

So two Austrians named Harrer and Kasterek, equipped with provisions for five days, left the base of Mt. Eiger, and began to assail the ogre that had swallowed nine daredevils since the summer of 1935. Next morning two Bavarians, Voerg and Heckmaier, followed the first pair.

Mt. Eiger, a 13,042ft. peak in the Jungfrau range, was first scaled in 1858, and has been climbed many times since. But until three years ago, the Eiger has never been tackled via its north wall—a terrifying, ice-coated precipice over a mile high.

Then two glory-greedy Germans decided to attempt it. They never returned. Nor did seven others who tried.

Swiss guides agreed that the 1938 invaders had no better chance than their predecessors. From the hotel terrace at Kleine Scheidegg, a mile below, curious tourists and anxious natives watched the climbers through telescopes.

ENVELOPED IN SNOW.

For three days they watched them, inching their way like tiny black spiders up a white web.

The third evening, the quartet that had started out as two competing teams joined ropes, stood lashed to the rock, 500ft. from the top, waiting for dawn and the crawl to victory.

Next day the natives shuddered. Mt. Eiger was enveloped in a swirling froth of snow. In spite of the fact that Swiss authorities had warned that local guides could no longer be asked to risk their lives trying to rescue Eigerwand climbers, two natives clambered to the summit over the usual route, peered down the overhanging wall when the storm let up for a moment, saw no one, and returned to the valley.

The following morning, as spectators ran to the telescopes for a morbid view of frozen corpses, the quartet calmly walked into Kleine Scheidegg.

They had conquered the Eigerwand during the blinding snowstorm, reaching their goal at twilight the evening before.

ULSTER TRANSPORT BOARD

PART-TIME MEMBERS REAPPOINTED.

The following, whose appointments as part-time members of the Road Transport Board for Northern Ireland will expire on 23rd inst., have been reappointed for a further period of one year.—The Earl of Enniskillen, C.M.G., D.L.; Mr. James R. Haslett, Mr. Samuel Haughton, Mr. David Wilson Smyth, D.L.; Mr. Robert H. Smyth, D.L., and Mr. James E. Wilson.

ELEPHANTS' HAVOC IN PARK

TREES UPROOTED LIKE CYCLONE.

Herds of elephants in the Kruger National Park, South Africa, are causing "almost unbelievable damage."

The report for 1937 of the National Park's Board of Trustees states that the elephants' numbers have increased. Now they are spreading over the northern portion, uprooting large numbers of fine palm trees, some nearly 100 feet high, which were transplanted there from the swampy districts of the Singwedsi and Letaba Rivers.

The elephants, the report says, will push down a large tree merely to pluck a few shoots from near the top or to get a small piece of ivy growing on it.

Where a herd has passed the bush looks as though a cyclone has swept through it. After the close of the tourist season elephants several times invaded the Letaba Camp, broke the fence, and damaged the palms inside.

Elephants are now found permanently along both bands of the Olifants River. Four bulls remained permanently close to the rest camp at the Olifants Pontoon last year and often spent the whole day resting unconcernedly within 50 or 60 yards of a gang of natives who were building a causeway.

On several occasions a herd of about 50 elephants appeared and did not betray any particular uneasiness at the work that was going on and fed within 150 yards of the gang.

After the completion of the causeway and the departure of the gang, one of the old bulls either in malice or michief attacked a tent and completely destroyed it, afterwards breaking up various road signals in the vicinity.

"It would seem," says the report, "that elephants when they are used to persecution wreak such vengeance as they can upon anything in which they detect human odour, whereas in places where they do not recognise man as an enemy they have no desire to harm either him or his belongings."

Since unrestricted shooting of elephants has been going on in Portuguese East Africa for the past year a great many animals have no doubt crossed into the park. The number here now must be at least 500.

It is easy to distinguish the newcomers from the old residents since the smallest whiff of human scent is enough to send them off in a panic.—Reuter.

FINANCIAL REVIEW

UNCERTAIN POLITICAL MARKETS

SERIES OF ADVERSE FACTORS

BUSINESS VERY LIMITED

LONDON, Friday Night.—Naturally enough, business on the Stock Exchange during the past week has shown little or no improvement, and, in view of the critical condition of affairs on the Continent, there would appear to be little prospect of business developing satisfactorily in the immediate future.

In addition to the menace of the Czecho-Slovakian situation, the markets have been depressed by the instability of Wall Street and at home by the deplorable railway traffic returns and the prospect of more annual reports of the character of that presented by the Calico Printers' Association, which notifies a loss of £93,542 for the year ending June 30 last as against a profit last year of £116,174.

THE BERLIN BOURSE SLUMP.

Possibly the most hopeful happening in a sense has been the tremendous slump that has occurred on the Berlin Bourse, as this may provide the German nation with a salutary reminder of the chaos that would result from war, and that even their abnormal army manœuvres are likely to cost them much more than they bargained for.

In an article on the Stock Exchange situation, which appears in the "Frankfurter Zeitung," the writer expresses the opinion that the recent falls on the Bourse have allowed prices to find their proper level. At a time when taxation had been increased and dividends restricted it was illogical, he states, that shares should stand higher than fixed interest loans issues.

This fact, he adds, was also responsible for the concentration of the recent selling pressure on shares. Firms requiring liquid cash, as a result of the demands made on them by the Four-Year Plan, preferred to sell out their shareholdings rather than loan stock which promised to maintain its value in the future.

British Government stocks, though presenting a relatively firm front, have inclined to dwindle and in the aggregate show some appreciable declines.

Home Rails have fallen further and heavily as the traffic returns for the past week showing an aggregate decrease in the revenue of the group lines of £238,000 were worse than expected.

FOREIGN RAILWAY FEATURE.

In the Foreign Railway market the feature has been the further sharp fall in Sao Paulo (Brazil) railway stock of 2½ points to 36, due to some falling off in the traffics and the currency uncertainty.

Foreign Government Bonds have been very quiet except in the case of Chinese and Japanese issues, which have advanced from one to two points on "bear" covering, following the apparent settlement of the Soviet-Japanese frontier dispute.

In the Industrial department the declines have been so general as to make it almost invidious to single out for comment any particular security or group of shares, but it may be remarked that the further fall in Pinchin Johnsons is due to apprehension of a cut in the forthcoming interim dividend.

MINING MARKET DULL.

The Mining share market has presented a dull appearance during the past week, although losses have not been substantial. East Rand Props. and South African Lands have fallen away. Several of the dividend payers, however, have improved.

Among the more recent shares Western Holdings have changed hands with considerable freedom and have improved slightly on the receipt of a somewhat vague cable, while Marievales have strengthened on Cape buying.

West Africans have moved against holders.

Among Rhodesian Gold shares, Sherwood Stars have been a firm feature on the receipt of an excellent development cable.

Coppers have weakened, the price of the metal being 17s 6d per ton lower.

Tin shares have fallen back on the drop of £2 6s 3d per ton in the metal price.

Miscellaneous Mines have been weaker, while Diamond shares have given way under the lead of De Beers Deferred.

OIL SHARES DULL.

A weaker tendency has prevailed in the Oil share market during the past week. Royal Dutch and Shells have been offered, while Burmahs have also moved in a downward direction. Trinidad Leases, however, have been supported.

RUBBERS IRREGULAR.

Some irregularity has been evident in the Rubber share market and business has not been on extensive lines. The price of the commodity has fallen away to 7 27-32d per lb. Rubber Trusts and Malayalams have weakened, but Tanjong Malims have attracted a good deal of attention.

TEA SHARES QUIET.

Quiet conditions have prevailed in the Tea share market during the past week and prices have moved within narrow limits.

BOARD OF TRADE POWERS.

Government departments move slowly and the Board of Trade is no exception to the rule. One hears a great deal of the powers possessed by the Board of Trade, but it is known chiefly for the trade figures. Under the joint stock company's laws it can be appealed to for inquiries into the affairs of a company, and recently two applications have been made. Apparently the Board of Trade officials are seeking information to justify an inquiry, and one cannot complain. Sufficient time, however, should have elapsed for a decision to be given.

WEST AFRICAN MINING STAGNATION.

Life has evaporated from the West African market, and quotations are sagging. There is no adverse change in the mining position to justify the fall in Konongos, Lyndhurst, and Nanwas, to which in the past attention has been directed. This group of mines, which adjoins, are on the same line of reef, and the Konongo is a dividend payer. It is hoped to see these mines amalgamated and managed by the Consolidated Gold Fields of South Africa, which is already largely interested in the Nanwa and Konongo. The Nanwa is regarded as a mine in the making, but plans for a plant have yet to be approved. The Konongo is earning about £140,000 per annum on a capital of £619,258 12s in 2s shares, while the Lyndhurst owns 2,723,411 shares in addition to its properties on each side of the Konongo. Holders of the three shares should not be discouraged, because the quotations are lower than two months ago.

PROPERTY COMPANIES' DEAL.

The directors of the Beaumont Property Trust propose to increase the capital of the company to £900,000 by the creation of 150,000 each of new Preference and Ordinary £1 shares, the same to constitute the purchase price for the issued 150,000 each of Preference and Ordinary £1 shares of the Langford Property Co. The new Preference shares are to rank for dividend as from October 1, 1938, and the new Ordinary shares will not be entitled to any dividend in respect of the year ending September 30, 1938.

RYLANDS AGAIN PASS INTERIM.

As has been their practice during the past three years, the directors of Rylands & Sons, the Manchester merchants, have decided to defer consideration of a dividend on Ordinary shares until the results of the full year to January 19, 1939, are known. For each of the two preceding years a distribution of 3 per cent. was made on the Ordinary shares.

WOLSEY ANNOUNCEMENT.

Wolsey, Ltd., which last March cleared off the whole of their Preference dividend arrears, have now reverted to the policy of paying regular half-yearly dividends, announcing that the dividend on the Preference shares for the half-year ended June 30, 1938, will be paid on September 1.

BARRIER DIVIDEND CUT SHARPLY.

The North Broken Hill Limited, as a consequence of the heavy fall in prices of metal, announces a sharp cut in its dividend, viz., to only 6d per share, as compared with a dividend of 1s 6d and bonus of 6d per share a year ago. The total distribution for the year ended June 30, 1938, is thus brought up to 60 per cent., as compared with a total distribution of 120 per cent. for 1936-37, the shares being of the denomination of 5s.

ANOTHER GOOD SHIPPING REPORT.

A trading profit of £317,723 is reported by the directors of the Ropner Shipping Company for the year ended June 30 last, as compared with £261,264, including subsidy, for previous year. The net profit works out at £63,380, against £50,679. The final dividend is 4 per cent., and £9,097 is carried forward compared with £6,533 brought in.

DIVIDENDS AND REPORTS.

British Rayophane—Net profit £9,656, against £11,024, debit balance £12,296.

North Broken Hill—Final dividend of 10 per cent. (6d per share). This brings the payment for the year up to 60 per cent., compared with a total distribution of 120 per cent. for 1936-37. Last year's final consisted of a dividend of 30 per cent. and a bonus of 10 per cent.

Ropner Shipping Co.—Report for the year ended June 30 shows a total profit of £323,300, which includes a gain of £1,956 on the realisation of investments. The profit for 1936-37 was £263,332. Final dividend of 4 per cent., less tax, making 10 per cent., compared with the previous year's payment of 8 per cent. The sum of £34,820 has been deducted for repairs and general charges, against £24,654, and £30,000, against £25,000, provided for surveys, while insurance reserve is doubled at £40,000. Tax absorbs £14,000 more at £55,000, while depreciation of vessels is again £100,000, and the carry forward is £9,097, against £6,553.

Rylands and Sons—The directors have decided to defer consideration of a dividend on the Ordinary stock until the results of the full year's trading are known. This procedure was followed last year, a dividend of 3 per cent. being declared in February last.

Second Alliance Trust—Final dividend of 12 per cent., less tax, on the Ordinary stock for the year. This payment will bring the year's distributions up to 21 per cent., compared with a final of 14 per cent., making 20 per cent. for the previous year. The final dividend is payable on the stock as increased during the year.

Union Insurance Society of Canton—Interim of 12½ per cent. (Same.)

Ransomes and Rapier—Interim dividend of 2½ per cent. (free of tax) on the Ordinary shares (same).

GERMAN REVENUE INCREASE.

The receipts of the Reich from taxation and Customs sources during the financial year 1937-8 totalled approximately £1,167,000,000 at the present rate of exchange, compared with about £878,000,000 in the previous year (states the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post" Berlin correspondent).

Compared with the receipts during 1932, the year of the deepest depression in Germany, the Reich income from these sources has more than doubled.

The building trade in Germany is suffering not only from a shortage of constructional steel and timber, but also from a lack of cement. The greater part of available supplies is being absorbed by Government building schemes, and private building is severely hit. In addition, large numbers of skilled workmen have been sent away on manœuvres, which aggravates the situation.

Three men were further remanded at Stourbridge on Friday on charges arising out of the £2,300 jewel robbery at the Hagley home of Mr. C. F. Walters, formerly England and Worcester cricketer, on July 30.

Mr. Michael Higgs, prosecuting, stated that a very substantial part of the property had been recovered, but the police thought more could be found.

It is hoped to proceed with the charges on August 31.

The men remanded were John Buxton (40), bricklayer; Eric James Charles (29), gardener, both charged with breaking and entering the house and stealing £2,300 worth of jewellery the property of Mrs. Walters, and Harry Cooper (39), bricklayer, charged with being an accessory after the fact.

Charles was remanded until August 31 on bail, but Buxton and Cooper were again remanded for seven days in custody.

Charles M'Dermott, Maghereagh, was fined 10s for riding a bicycle carelessly and 2s 6d for having a defective brake.

It was stated that defendant cycled out of a side road and collided with a motor-cyclist.

Eric M'Afee, 40 Portmore Street, Portadown, and Andrew M'Garrigle, Tully, Newbuildings were each fined 2s 6d for failing to keep records of hours of driving.

"RATHER PITIABLE CASE."

DONEMANA LARCENY CHARGE.

"It is a rather pitiable case," remarked Captain P. S. Bell, R.M., at Donemana Petty Sessions on Friday when he dealt with charges against James Cunningham and his wife, Jeannie Cunningham, Drumenny, for stealing a chair and a stool, the property of a neighbour, James M'Gettigan.

M'Gettigan, a farmer, said in February, 1937, a chair disappeared from his byre and in January, 1938, he missed a stool from his premises. Later he saw the articles at defendants' house.

Mr. F. G. Dickson said the defence was that the articles were found by defendants' children, who brought them to the house.

Sergeant Lynn said the husband, in a statement, said he knew nothing about the articles, as the furniture belonged to his wife. The wife made no statement.

M'Gettigan said he did not want to press the case.

Dismissing the case against the husband, the R.M. said defendant was a postman who had served in the war, and he hoped that the Post Office authorities would take no disciplinary action against him. Mrs. Cunningham was allowed off on the payment of costs.

DERRY ROAD WIDENING.

BOUNDARY WALL PROBLEM.

There was further reference at a meeting of the Committee of Management of Derry City and County Mental Hospital on Friday to the proposed widening of the thoroughfare and the erection of a boundary wall at Academy Road, Derry.

It had been previously agreed that in consideration of the committee making a grant of a strip of ground for road widening purposes, that the Corporation would erect a boundary wall, and at the last meeting of the committee it was decided to insist that this wall should be of solid concrete six feet high, the estimated cost being £650.

Sir James Wilton, M.C. (Mayor) at Friday's meeting reminded the committee that the original idea was merely to put up such a fence as would prevent trespassing on the property of the institution. This, according to the committee's own architect, would have cost from £90 to £275. Subsequently the Corporation suggested that in consideration of the Mental Hospital Committee granting the ground for road widening purposes the Corporation would build a substantial boundary wall. The Mayor submitted that the erection of a solid concrete wall at £650 as insisted on by the committee was not an economic proposition from the point of view either of the hospital authorities or the Corporation, inasmuch as it was almost certain that at no far distant date this property would be wanted for building development, which would mean the pulling down of the wall. The Mayor, who asked the committee to reconsider the question, added that the cost of widening the street was £950.

The committee agreed to reconsider the question at the next meeting.

DERRY MENTAL HOSPITAL.

AIR RAID PRECAUTIONS MENTIONED.

Senator J. A. Long, D.L., was unanimously re-elected chairman of the Committee of Management of Derry City and County Mental Hospital at a meeting of that body on Friday. This is his 20th year of office.

Mr. J. R. Scott, D.L., proposing the appointment, said as long as Senator Long was willing to act they were most anxious to appoint him.

Dr. J. P. Kerlin, J.P., seconding, said they hoped Senator Long would live for very many years to preside over their meetings.

Mr. F. M'Ilroy, Mr. W. G. Webb, J.P., and Sir James Wilton, M.C., joined in paying tribute to Senator Long's past services.

Returning thanks, the Chairman spoke of the harmony that prevailed at their meetings and in the general work of the institution.

On the motion of Mr. W. G. Webb, seconded by Sir James Wilton, Mr. Jas. Mark, M.B.E., was re-appointed vice-chairman.

Dr. J. P. Kerlin submitted a satisfactory report on behalf of the Visiting Committee

Dr. T. R. Haire, acting resident medical superintendent, reported that there were 597 patients in the institution on that date compared with 596 at the same period last year. The general health of the patients was satisfactory.

Mr. W. G. Webb—Have any special steps or precautionary measures been taken in the event of an air raid?

Dr. Haire—No. I cannot say we have taken any precautions. The question did not arise previously.

Mr. Webb said with regard to Gransha, he thought that precautions should be taken.

Mr. S. E. Haire (clerk) said during the Great War they took certain precautions on the instructions of the War Department. If the necessity arose, he supposed they would act on similar instructions.

Mr. M'Ilroy—There is no urgency in the matter. There is no immediate prospect of war.

The Chairman—We think no action is called for at the moment.

Mr. J. R. Scott—We could take measures in conjunction with the Corporation.

Sir James Wilton said the Corporation were dealing with this question.

The Chairman—We will adjourn consideration of the matter in the meantime.

On the motion of Mr. M'Ilroy, seconded by Mr. J. R. Scott, D.L., it was decided to grant a superannuation allowance of £107 13s 4d to T. R. Jackson, charge attendant, on resigning after 34 years' service.

50,000 MOURNERS AT A CZECH FUNERAL.

SUDETEN PAPER CENSORED

OVER RUNCIMAN STAFF VISIT.

PRAGUE, Saturday.—Dr. Hodza, the Czecho-Slovak Prime Minister, is leaving this afternoon to attend the funeral of Father Hlinka, leader of the Slovak Autonomy Party, who died on Tuesday.

Father Hlinka, known as "The Eagle of Slovakia," is being given a national funeral to-morrow, at Ruzomberok, the town in Slovakia which was his parish.

Herr Henlein, the Sudeten German leader, is being represented by Herr Frank, a Sudeten German deputy. There will be seven other Sudeten deputies and senators.

Over 50,000 mourners are expected, including representatives from Poland and Rumania.

A Sudeten German local paper has appeared with blank spoces in its news columns, indicating that certain passages nav ebeen censored.

The passages alleged that Mr. Frank Gwatkin and Mr. Geoffrey Peto, members of Lord Runciman's staff, were greeted with cries of "Shame" when they visited the Bohemian town of Brux to investigate disorders.

The disturbances which accompanied the installation of a German as Mayor of the town earlier in the week were brought to Lord Runciman's notice while he was meeting Herr Henlin at Komotau on Thursday—Reuter.

BATTLE OF SPEED KINGS AT CLADY

17TH ULSTER GRAND PRIX

WELL-ORGANISED EVENT

WORLD-FAMOUS CIRCUIT

THE SEVENTEENTH INTERNATIONAL MOTOR-CYCLE RACE FOR THE ULSTER GRAND PRIX TOOK PLACE OVER THE WORLD-FAMOUS CLADY CIRCUIT THIS AFTERNOON.

The event was, as usual, organised by the Ulster Motor-cycle Club, and it was early evident that the work of preparation had been well and thoroughly done.

The committee in charge, with Mr. W. A. M'Master as race secretary, had their arrangements as complete as it was humanly possible to make them.

When the maroon sounded and the first engine fired they had the satisfaction of knowing that they had done all that mortals could do to merit success.

IRISH MIDLANDS MURDER.

STATE PATHOLOGIST

CHIEF WITNESS AT INQUEST

SHOT AT CLOSE RANGE, HE SAYS.

That the deceased was shot at close range was the opinion expressed by Dr. J. M'Grath, State Pathologist, at the inquest yesterday on Cornelius Dennehy, a Cork butter buyer, who was found shot dead in his car near the Swan, Queen's County, on Wednesday.

After evidence of identification had also been given, an adjournment sine die was granted by the Coroner, Dr. T. J. M'Cormick.

A pathetic figure at the inquest was Mr. Daniel Dennehy, a brother of the deceased, who, at the conclusion of his evidence, could not hide his grief. Standing up he said "May the Lord have mercy on his soul. I hope he is in Heaven."

Dr. M'Grath said he first saw the body lying on the front seat of a Ford V-8 car. It lay with the buttocks under the steering wheel and the head towards the door on the left. The face was downwards. There were various stains of blood on and near the car. There was brain matter on the front seat under the body, and one portion was behind the left buttock

He said he had performed a full post-mortem examination. There was a large wound on the right side of the head. The lower margin of the wound was the middle of the ear, and the wound extended towards the left eye. It measured about two inches from back to front, and about 1½ inches perpendicularly. The tissues were spread widely, and the bones of the face and skull were extensively fractured and the brain pulped.

Dr. M'Grath added—"I found in the wound two felt cartridge wads and one cardboard wad. I found a second cardboard wad in brain matter in the car seat."

There were, he said, many lead pellets of shot inside the head, especially just behind the left eye. The lower edge of the wound was scorched. All the organs were normal, and there were no bruises on the body except for a small scrape on the outside of the left arm, which had been inflicted after death.

Dr. M'Grath, proceeding, said that death, in his opinion, was attributable to shock following a gunshot wound in the head. The range was very short, and two barrels had been fired into the head at the same time.

Acting Chief Superintendent Muldoon said that was all the evidence he proposed to offer at that stage, and asked for an adjournment. It would serve them better and keep them right for further proceedings, the inquest to be resumed whether or not there were criminal proceedings.

LAWN SUBURBANITE WILL WELCOME

ONCE-A-YEAR MOW DOES.

WHAT THE "TURFING DAISY" DOES.

Horticultural experts announce the "turfing daisy" to make life easier for the man of the house (says a New York message).

It is said to develop rapidly into a close mat of foliage never more than two inches high and of a rich green hue. It grows wherever ordinary lawn grass will sustain itself.

And it has virtues beyond the dreams of the most imaginative householder.

It does not require any water except that supplied free from the sky. And it has to be mowed exactly once a year in late May or early June, just after the little flowers appear.

For the rest of the summer the turfing daisy fancier just sits luxuriously in the shade and watches it grow.

'DUMMY SPEED COPS'

LATEST ROAD SAFETY SCHEME.

NOVEL CANADIAN IDEA

PLANNED AT ALL DANGER POINTS.

"Dummy speed cops" are now in the news.

Toronto is considering a proposal that the "dummy speed cops," realistic figures of wood and paint mounted on motor-cycles, should be erected on the roadside at every curve, hilltop, and dangerous highway stretch in the Province.

Mr. N. A. M'Dougall, of Toronto, has made the first dummy, a life-size figure, and Highways Department officials are looking it over.

"From observations, I believe that people drive more sanely when within sight of a policeman and with this thought in mind I have had made an exact model of a provincial officer sitting on his motor-cycle," says Mr. M'Dougall.

"If police officers were instructed to park in a similar manner to these signs, the reckless driver could never be sure whether or not the officer was real until quite close, and by that time he would presumably have corrected his driving."

"ROBOTS" ON ROAD DUTY.

In Verona, New Jersey, the "dummy cops" are actually in use.

For the last few months Verona, through which thousands of motorists pass on Sundays, has enforced a 20-mile-an-hour speed limit.

Mayor David H. Slayback and the police force of 15 have been so busy handing out warnings and summonses that they have almost lost count. Finally Mayor Slayback supplemented his force with 6ft. 2in. robot, modelled after one of the town's policemen.

The robot will issue no summonses but, with its waving arms and rolling eyes, it is expected to serve as a warning.

With its hidden motor, its electrical wiring, its frame of three-ply wood and its uniform of blue paint, it costs about £20.

The 77-year-old Mayor talked of building seven more robots, which, he said, might "do away with a lot of police work," and perhaps "leave the boys with nothing to do but to get cats out of trees."

RACE TO BE ABANDONED

AT HURST NOVEMBER MEETING.

The valuable juvenile event, the Hurst Park Two-Year-Old Stakes, which has been for some years the feature of the November meeting there, is to be abandoned. In its place there will be a £1,000 handicap over seven furlongs, the weights to be published on the day after the Cambridgeshire, so that competitors for that race will be re-handicapped.

HELPED TO FIND JOCKEYS.

An arrangement to assist owners and trainers in engaging jockeys was instituted at Hurst Park on Friday. A sheet was pasted on the weighing-room wall on which was a space for all six races of the current day. Jockeys were asked to write their names in the spaces allotted to the races in which they were riding.

Owners and trainers in need of a jockey were thus able to see at a glance the jockeys riding in any particular race.

100TH RAID ON CITY DURING WAR.

BARCELONA BOMBING.

ATTACK BY 'PLANE RELAYS.

NOT NEAR MILITARY OBJECTIVE.

Barcelona was on Friday subjected to the worst aid raids it has experienced since those of March. For the first time for five months the city and a wide area round it were heavily bombed by relays of insurgent 'planes

The casualties are at present estimated at 20 dead and 90 wounded. More than 30 buildings were destroyed or damaged. One bomb fell in the centre of one of Barcelona's most popular promenades, leaving a six foot crater in the pavement, and smashing windows for a quarter of a mile around.

The bombs dropped were mostly of the 100lb. variety, which explode on contact.

This fact is due to the unusually large number of freak explosions, and the relatively low number of dead in comparison to the injured.

Had the bombs been larger, or of a delayed fuse variety, the number of victims in this densely-populated section of the city would probably have exceeded 500.

I made a tour of the bombed areas, and failed to find that a single bomb had fallen within a quarter of a mile of any military objective. Yesterday morning's bombing was the 100th air bombardment to be suffered by Barcelona proper since the war began.

"GANGSTER'S WELCOME."

The newspaper "El Noticiero," in an editorial last night, calls yesterday morning's bombing "A Gangster's Welcome," and says that Al Capone could have done no better than Mussolini in thus showing his contempt of British opinion by bombing Barcelona's civil population on the night of the Bombing Commission's arrival.

PORTS PUT UNDER MILITARY LAW.

WAR INDUSTRIES DECREE.

NEW OFFENSIVE IN ANDALUSIA.

Spain's reconstructed Republican Cabinet has tightened up the control of ports and war industries in a series of new decrees.

All factories and workshops producing arms are put under the special Commissariat for Arms, and all ports, including individuals and bodies working in port zones, are put under military control.

General Franco's troops claim to have won a big victory on the Ebro front, seriously endangering the positions on the right bank of the river won by the Republicans in their recent offensive. The Republicans are stated to have lost several thousand dead.

The Government do not admit this defeat, declaring that their troops have not yielded an inch of the ground in spite of heavy pressure.

They report a new offensive in Andalusia, in the Motril sector, about half-way between Malaga and Almeria.

Group Captain Smyth-Pigott and Major Legeune, the British Commissioners investigating air raids on Spanish towns, have visited at Alicante the water-logged British steamer Noemi Ulia, which was badly damaged in an air raid last week.

They also visited Denia, Torreviea, and Villa Oyosa, which have been raided several times.—Reuter.

THE FRANCO REPLY.

FULL TEXT IN LONDON.

TRANSLATORS AT WORK.

Translators are at work on the full text of General Franco's reply to the British plan for the withdrawal of foreign volunteers from Spain, which has now arrived in London.

It is understood to be rather more than fifteen hundred words in length.

Lord Plymouth, chairman of the Non-Intervention Committee, who is at present on holiday in South Wales, will, it is understood, come to London on Monday, and probably consult Foreign Office officials on the reply.

Lord Halifax, the Foreign Secretary, is not expected in London on Monday, but the Prime Minister will then be returning for a short time from Cheques, and he will no doubt study General Franco's answer.

Another possible course is that copies of the answer will be sent to the members of the Non-Intervention Committee, so that they can consult their Governments upon it.

It is understood that the reply will be issued simultaneously in Burgos.

The general impression is that it will contain a good many reservations with regard to the withdrawal plan.

LIGHTNING STRUCK HOUSES

BELFAST STREETS DESERTED.

The violent thunderstorm, accompanied by lightning and a shower of hailstones as large as peas, which burst over a large area of Ulster on Friday night, did only a small amount of damage.

Two houses in Sheridan Street, on the Antrim Road side of Belfast, were struck by lightning. In one the chimney-stack was demolished and damage was done to the roof of the other.

Mr. O'Reilly, of Annadale Street, who was a witness, said he saw a ball of flame on the tops of the houses. A passer-by had a narrow escape fom falling bricks.

The streets of the city, which were deserted while the storm was at its height, were covered with hailstones.

Electricity supplies were only momentarily affected. Fortunately flooding was slight. The storm did not last more than fifteen minutes.

Later in the evening traffic in Belfast was held up by the snapping of a tramway trolley wire in Wellington Place. Homeward-bound theatregoers were held up, but although the power was switched off in certain sections, emergency services were arranged where possible.

The breakdown lasted from 10-45 until 11-15.
